WASHINGTON LETTER.

[Our Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, June 22, 1891.

The Ntional Democratic committee has according to private and trust worthy information decided that it will be useless to fight Maj. McKinley in Ohio, as its agents report his election as certain no matter who may be put up against him. Therefore the committee is engaged in mapping out a programme for its party in that State whereby it hopes to gain the United States Senator and to throw a brand of discord into the republican National convention next year. This is, in short, to trade votes for McKinley for votes for democratic candidates for the legislature, and to spend all the money that can be raised in the doubtful legislative districts. By this method it hopes to secure a democratic successor to Senator and to give Maj. McKinley such a phenominal majority for governor as to bring him prominently forward as a Presidental candidate, in the hope that its candidacy may arouse antagonisms in the republican party that will jeopardize its success next year. Forewarned is forearmed as far as the legislature is concerned, and the Ohio republican may be trusted to take care of that, said a member of the administration to me, "and as far as the Presidential part of the scheme is concerned, the delegates to the next republican national convention will, as they have always done, nominated the man who is, all things considered, the most available at the time, and its work will be enthusiastically ratified by the party. Republican conventions have always differed from those of their opponents, in that they have never been dominated by any one man, or one set of men.

Senator Hale is in Washington, and he brings the best news concerning Secretary Blaine's health. He thinks that by the fall the Secretary will be prepared to resume his duties with all of his old time vigor. It must not be supposed that because Secretary Blaine is away he has given up the direction of the Department of State, because he has done no such thing. Nothing of any importance concerning the affairs of his department has been done since he left here without consulting with him and obtaining his advice and consent. By being away he has simply avoided the thousand and one essential details with which he would have to bother if he was here, and some things have been postponed which might have been done had he remained here.

The President, who went to Cape May Point with Mrs. Harrison and the children last week, is expected to return to Washington to-morrow or next day, in order to take up some important questions and a cabinet meeting has been called for Friday to which these questions are to be submitted. As most of them relates to the Treasury department Secretary Foster, who is now in Ohio, will return in time to attend.

The North American Commercial company which is the present lessee of the Alaskan sealing privilege, has filled a protest in the Treasury department against the recent agreement with England limiting its catch of seals during the present season to seven thousand five hundred. It has also given notice of a claim amounting to four hundred thousand dollars which it will present against the Government for not allowing it to take the number of seals mentioned in the contract, during the season of 1890. It is expected that a claim equally as large or larger will be set up against the Government on account of its losses during the present season. It cannot of course be said at this time what will be done about these claims, but from opinions expressed by Secretary Blaine and other members of the administration last year when the question of limiting the catch of seal first came up it is fair to infer that the administration will favor reimbursing the company to the amount of its actual expenditure, which will fall far short of the amount named.

An attempt has been made and is still being made to have the impression go out that the administration does not wish Maj. McKinley be elected governor of Ohio. Nothing could be further from the truth. The President and every member of the cabinet is anxious for the confident of the election of McKinley, and they will each and every one of them do everything that can be consistently done to make his majority as large as possible. There are no jealousies among the republican leaders and no amount of misrepresentation can engender them.

The tin plate liar has turned his attention to the Treasury department and all sorts of stories are being a deficit there in. There is no deficit, and no danger of one. There is a surplus, and now that the heaviest payments due for some time have been made it will grow very rapidly.

For the Fourth of July.

The general committee on fourth of July celebration held a meeting Monday evening. The secretary read a communication from the Milton Steam fire engine company accepting the invitation to be present, with band, on that day. A communication from the Hand in Hand, of Lock Haven, stated that they would have not less than twenty men in line. The Military committee reported that they had secured hotel accommodations and stabling at Haag's hotel for all of the Sheirdan troop. Mr. Dunlap, of the fantastics, reported progress and asked for an appropriation to defray all neccessary expense. So voted. In the matter of getting a special train to run from Bellefonte to Philipsburg rfter the celebration, Col. Sprngler reported progress. The finance committee was instructed to make a final effort towards the raising of more funds. Fully five hundred dollars more will be needed and when any of the committee visit you give liberally. The committee finally adjourned to meet next Monday night.

What They Could Do.

It is clamed that John Rockerfeller could give every man, women and child in the United States $2 each and still have left the modest sum of $1,000,000 with which to start a peanut stand. Wm. Waldorf Astor could do the same thing. While our own dear Jay Gould could give $1,60 each and have left $8,000,000 with which to sink a well for more water. It is also started that Mr. Jones and Mr. Brown, who work ten hours each day, can only give their wives $4.50 once a year, and Mr. Smith, who works from 6 a. m. to 6. p. m. upon a section on the railroad at $1.10 per day, and supports a wife and five children, says he would be a financial wreck if he squandered a darn cent.

HE SIGNED THEM ALL.

GOVERNOR PATTISON PUTS HIS NAME TO IMPORTANT BILLS.

A telegram from Harrisburg this morning announced the fact that Governor Pattison had just signed the Ballot Reform bill, authorizing a constitutional convention, and the Appropriation bill for the State College, which is for $150,500.

THE Prince of Wales ought to make a successful southern democrat politician. He carries his "counters" around with him.

M'Kinley for Governor of Ohio.

From the New York Press.

Republicans all over the country will take new courage from the harmony and enthusiam with which the Ohio state convention has named William *Mc*Kinley for governor. He is beyond all doubt the strongest candidate that could have been named; strong in his record as a gallant soldier and as a legislative leader; strong in his spotless career both as a private citizen and as a public servant; strong in his loyalty to his party and in his loyalty as well to his pledges of political friendship, even when the presidency was within his own grasp to tempt him, and growing stronger every day as time vindicates the great measure bearing his name—not one law merely, but a whole code of laws for the development of American resources, the development of American labor, the insuring of large supply and low prices to American national wealth.

No one could find fault if Major *Mc*Kinley were content to rest on these laurels, but he is not. He is in the prime of life, and a growing man. His speech to the convention on Wednesday shows that he is by no means a man of only one idea, however tremendous in its bearings on the material and intellectual and moral welfare of the nation that idea may be. His forceful and courageous words on the currency question show that his economic soundness is broad as well as deep, and that he is not a Bourbon who is unable to see new issues as they arise and to appreciate the need of facing them promptly and fearlessly in the name of right rather than expediency.

With such a leader, an object not only of national attention but of national respect and enthusiasm, the republicans of Ohio have the eyes of the country on them this year. If their fight to redeem Ohio is second in importance to the battle royal for governorship of New York, it is second only to that, and even then, second only because New York is a close and doubtful state, while Ohio is a republican state every time on a full vote. We all expect Ohio republicans to win, and the only disappointment we regard as possible is that the majority for William McKinley may be under 50,000.

The State Candidates.

The people of Pennsylvania will be called upon this year to elect a State Treasurer and an officer of importance. Referring to this matter the Evening Bulletin gives some excellent advice, remarking that the State convention in making up its ticket must discard every aspirant for either of these places whose public and private record is not entirely free of reproach. The candidaets this year must be men who are not associated with any disreputabe interest, either political or financial, and whose names will be a guarantee of honest, faithful performance of public duty. It is not a time when any "slates" or "deals" will be tolerated by the party. The ticket must be one that will command respect and confidence from the start, and which will not need defence or apologies. Not only that, it must be nominated by the convention itself without any coercion or cajolery.

The fact cannot be recognized too early that Republican success in Pennsylvania this year can be achieved only by deserving it. The coming convention must act up to the full measure of the demands and expectations of the people. It is a good year to retire the hacks and heelers who occupy seats in state conventions simply for the purpose of obeying orders and to fill their places with men who have an honest pride in the success of the party and who will consult public opinion and not the decrees of selfish leaders.

This is not an "off" year in the ordinaay sense of that term. The results of the November elections in Pennsylvania will extend beyond the mere choice of two financial officers of the Commonwealth. If, through a repetition of the follies and blunders of the past, Pennsylvania should again go Democratic, its electoral vote in 1892 might be a matter of doubt. The Pennsylvania Republicans will be called upon to face a party which is now under the most skillful leadership it has had for more than twenty years and which is flushed with the hope of profiting on the popular disgust over the infamies of Bardsley and on the demoralization still existing as a result of last year's disaster. The situation demands the wisest and most unselfish consideration from the party leaders if they do not wish to see Pennsylvania delivered over to the Democracy. It is time that they came together in the same spirit of amity that now characterizes the Republicans of Ohio. If they are not stone blind to the signs of the times, they will not stand in the way of the hopes of honest Republicans for a clean convention, a wholesome ticket, and new blood in in the party organization.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION

CHAIRMAN ANDREWS ISSUES HIS CALL FOR HARRISBURG AUGUST 19.

PHILADELPHIA, June 21.—Chairman W. H. Andrews, of the Republican State Committee, has issued this call for the Republican State Convention, which will be held August 19 in Harrisburg:

HEADQUARTERS REPUBLICAN STATE COMMITTEE, CONTINENTAL HOTEL, PHILADELPHIA, June 20.

To the Republican Electors of Pennsylvania: After consultation and correspondence with the members of the Republican State Committe, and by their direction, I hereby give notice that the republicans of Pennsylvania by their duly chosen representatives, will meet in state convention at HARRISBURG, on WEDNESDAY, AUGUST, 19th, 1891, at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the offices of state treasurer and auditor general; for the nomination of 18 candidates for delegates at large to the constitutional convention provided for in the act of assembly, approved June 19, 1891, and for the transaction of such other business as may be presented.

Notice is especially directed to the fact that, in accordance with the provisions of the last mentioned act, each senatorial district is entitled to a representation of the delegates in said constitutional convention, two of whom only can be members of the majority party in said disttrict. The electors of each district are, therefore, requested to make proper nominations for delegates to said convention, the rules governing the nomination of candidates for state senator to be applicable. In this connection the chairman desires to call the attention of republican voters to the recommendation of the state convention of 1882, that "they allow the greatest freedom in the general participation in the primaries consistent with the preservation of the party organization.'

WILLIAM H. ANDREWS, Chairman.
FRANK W. LEACH, Secretary.

THE story about the recent New York Cleveland conference may be all right in substance, but it certainly gets the details a little mixed up when it states that Senator Gorman has entered a compact to work for Cleveland's nomination. If Cleveland receives the nomination Gorman, being a party man, will support him, but it has long been an open secret among his friends that he would do so with great reluctance and it would be safe to wager largely that all the state-convention work Gorman does will be against Cleveland and not for him.

JAKE KILRAIN knows how the Ohio democracy will feel after it has been knocked out by Maj. McKinley. and as the people will act as referee there is no danger of any crooked business about the decision.

Ups and Downs of Diamonds.

STORIES THEY COULD TELL OF HUMAN VICISSITUDES IF GEMS COULD TALK.

From the Cincinnati Times-Star.

"Women exhibit a much more refined taste in the wearing of jewelry than they did a few years ago," remarked a well known jeweler, "but the dear things cost just as much to order as ever."

Diamonds, for instance, are now within the reach of almost everybody who is comfortably fixed. A small diamond of the purest water can be purchased for $5. A diamond is like a man. Let them rise to whatever proud heights they may, and let the whole world gaze enraptured upon their dazzling brilliancy, they must both return and begin a new life in a simple casket.

"Here is a jewel that illustrates my point exactly. Twenty-three years ago last February, as I was about to close up one terrible stormy night, a shabby young man entered my shop and offered to sell me a gold ring containing this stone surrounded by a ring of small sparklers. He asked $150 for the ring, saying it was all he had in the world. Ordinarily I would have flatly refused to deal with such a person, fearing to buy stolen property, and, indeed, I put him off that night with a lame excuse, although I admitted the value of the stone, and asked him to call around the next day. He declared that he must dispose of it that night, and at last I firmly refused to have anything further to do with him until the next day. On the morrow he came to me, saying he had pawned the ring for a trifling sum, as he was forced to do so to get accommodations for the night, but desired me to go with him to the pawnbroker's shop and examine the stone more closely. I did so and struck a bargain with him, and paying him the difference between my price and the pawn debt, carried off the jewel. I was strictly a business man then and asked no questions, although the fellow could probably have told an interesting story about the stone.

"Well I reset the stone in a lady's ring, and a month later it was carried off by an exultant lover, and it sparkled on the hand of a blushing bride in high life soon after. We jewelers keep track of a fine stone for years, for we realize the ups and downs of fortune. Well, to give you the facts of the case without the romance, ten years later I paid a half-starved, shivering woman exactly what her lover had paid me for the ring a week before her marriage, and as she led away her golden-haired girl she felt that she was rich with what she would have thrown aside a decade before.

"The next purchaser was a poorly old gentleman, who gave it to his young wife, whom he had taken from her school books to assume the management of a grand old mansion. It is just two years ago that the old gentleman, still hale and hearty, entered my shop, leading by the hand a bright-eyed little fellow whom he introduced as his son and heir. Then he stated the object of the visit. He said the ring reminded him too much and too plainly of the fair young mother, who never saw the face of her baby boy. He offered it to me at a bargain, and now for two years it has laid in this simple casket waiting for another adventure."

The Language of Gloves.

People who know about gloves use complicated vocabulary. They call the piece of leather a glove is made out of a trank. The side pieces to the fingers thy call fourchettes, and the little pieces that join the fourchettes to the gloves they call quirks, or sometimes gussets. The binding up and down the opening for the buttons and buttonholes they call the slit welt, and the top welt is the piece which is added to make the top of the glove. When they get to talking about glove seams they make a number of nice distinctions in stitches. They call it an in-seam when the edges are turned in and sewed through the inside. They talk about a prick seam when one edge is lapped over another. Oftenest of all they speak of the overstitch when the edges of the leather are sewn through and round. The welt seam is like the in-seam, except that it has a third piece of leather in the middle. If you look on your street gloves you will find it exemplified. There are ever so many kinds of glove buttons and hooks, and there are people who like most of them. When a glove is too tight there is no sort of fastening that seems adequate to the occasion. There is one sort of gloves which has no fastening at all. The kid is gathered a little at the wrist, and looks comfortable and slightly puffy. The Biarritz glove fastens with something that is called a bandalet, and is really a buckle.—Boston Transcript.

Four Additional Reasons.

The following additional reasons for a new trial for Charles Cleary have been presented to court by Messrs. Cress and McCormick, defendant's attorneys:

First. Josiah Candor, one of the jurors before whom the cause was tried, said before the jurors were summoned, in the presence of witnesses, that the defendent (Cleary) was guilty and that he would be hung, of which statement the defendant had no knowledge until after the trial.

Second. That the jurors were not kept separate and apart from the other guests of the hotel at which they were kept during the trial, as required by law.

Third. That during the progress of the trial the jurors were furnished with intoxicating liquors at the hotel where they boarded.

Fourth. That members of the jury held conversations with the tipstaves who had them in charge after Court had delivered his charge to them, and before they had agreed upon their verdict other than to ask them whether they had agreed.

A Party of Chilian Insurgents Killed.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—The Chilian legation in this city to-day received a telegram from Peru, which says, in substance, that when the warship Esmeralda, after its voyage to San Diego, arrived at Lesbos guano islands, the Captain, being short of provisions, landed fifty men to take posession of the provisions on the island. The employees and workingmen in care of the islands attacked the men from the vessel, killing them and taking posession of their arms. The Esmeralda fired eighty shots, exhausting her amnunition.

Maj. McKinley the next Governor of Ohio, stated a rock bound truth when he told the largest State convention ever assembled upon Ohio soil that "There is one thing can be said of the republican party which I do not believe can be said of any other party known to political history. It has been right on every great public question that has confronted the people of the nation within the last thirty years". Isn't that a proud record?

THE business men of the South are not far behind those of any other section in the ability to perceive the benefit of judicious advertising; hence their pressing invitation to President Harrison to attend the Industrial exhibitions in several southern cities this fall.

BACK INTO THE CRYPT.

M. MATHIAS'S STRANGE RUSE TO TEST THE FIDELITY OF HIS WIFE.

When they heard of the death of M. Mathias in the little city of Lyre-sur-Ys, there was a feeling of great surprise. A man scarcely 40 years old, robust, straight as an arrow, married only two years to a young and charming girl he adored, all exclaimed, "What a mischance!"

Naturally, now that M. Mathias was dead, they only discussed his virtues while living. He was no longer called a skinflint and miser. They even forgot the story of his famous marriage, which was not at all to his credit. Only a few recalled the vague dishas this great man had always inspired with his sly, treacherous ways, or the strange stories that, rich and retired from business, he employed his leisure hours in concocting and manipulating poisonous drugs, with which he experimented upon dogs and animals. But now these are idle tales. He is dead. Peace to his soul.

In carefully reflecting upon his death, was it so very extraordinary? Evidently M. Mathias had a presentiment of his demise. He had but lately constructed a family chapel in the cemetery, which awaited his remains. Moreover, for a long time he had appeared unquiet and restless, wandering around his house as if suspicious of mysterious robbers. For whole weeks he would shut himself up in his laboratory, and the chimney would roar and flame all night. "Premonitory symptoms of cerebral excitement," said Dr. Dabarre, "which will suddenly end in fatal apoplexy."

Well, to be brief, M. Mathias had a magnificent funeral. Scores of the population attended him to his last resting place. But I must confess there were many dry eyes. When the great oak coffin was lowered into the crypt of the funeral chapel it seemed truly monumental. Two men of his size could have slept in it easily.

On returning from the funeral, everybody was saying, "I wonder what the charming widow of M. Mathias will do?"

Now, to tell the truth, M. Mathias was not dead at all.

Two hours after the ceremony you could have witnessed a strange scene in the underground vault, where the bier had been placed.

A little sharp sound was heard, like the click of a spring; the coffin opened like a cupboard. M. Mathias raised up, stretching like a man just awakened from sleep.

A dim light from a grating in the upper part of the wall enabled you to see M. Mathias step from his coffin and rub his legs, which were a little cramped. Otherwise he felt very well, very comfortable, indeed. The narcotic potion he had swallowed, after careful measurement, had produced the exact effect he desired. They had believed him dead, had buried him; so far, so good.

For a long time M. Mathias had taken every precaution in preparing for this event. The vault in the chapel had been constructed with the most wonderful ingenuity, workmen had been brought from Paris to build it, secret places arranged for suitable clothing, eatables, and a few bottles of good wine, cool and fresh, as you may well suppose.

By this time M. Mathias realized that nothing hollows the stomach more than being buried; so comfortably seating himself on his coffin, he complacently ate his rations and drank to the future.

Now it is time to explain why M. Mathias is six feet under ground of his own free will.

As always, there is a woman in the case.

M. Mathias, formerly a druggist, enriched by pills and cataplasms, had fallen in love with the niece of the receiver of taxes for the city of Lyre-sur-Ys. He quickly proposed to the young girl, and she as quickly refused him, which rendered him as madly in love as an imbecile—pardon—as a man 40 years old who had never been in love before. Treacherous and dishonest by nature, he inveigled the receiver of taxes into a plot so skillful the unhappy man at the end of the year, knowing the government coffers were not intact, seriously contemplated suicide. Then M. Mathias appeared as a savior, imposed his little conditions, and the niece sacrificed herself for the uncle who had always been as a father to her, although she loved and was fiancee to a young notary of a neighboring city.

She, unhappy victim, submitted to all the consequences of this unfortunate marriage. But M. Mathias had the conviction that she hated him; from that it was easy to believe she deceived him; and this suspicion soon degenerated into positive monomania.

His wife never went out, no one ever visited the house. No matter, M. Mathias felt that only his own obtuseness, his want of finesse, prevented him from discovering her infidelity.

Then this luminous idea surged in his brain. He would simulate a journey, not to Havre or Versailles, like the husband in a comedy, but a longer journey, from which it was far more difficult to return. But he would return, safe and sound, one of these nights and confound his unfaithful spouse.

He had given himself three days to remain in the grave. Thinking of his nearly consummated plan with great satisfaction, he comfortably retired to rest in his coffin.

The third day was nearly ended. M. Mathias was becoming restless, and impatiently waited for the cemetery clock to strike 11, the hour he had appointed.

His plot was well arranged. The walls of the cemetery adjoined his property. He would dress himself all in black, a spectral druggist, take his winding sheet to throw around him while in the grounds through respect to the locality, pass through the gate, go straight to his own house, and then—he would see.

M. Mathias made his toilet; all things being in readiness, he pushed aside the stone which closed the vault, climbed to the upper chapel, opened the door, and was outside with his winding sheet under his arm. He unfolded the great white cloth and tried to throw it about him; it was heavy, he missed the mark, and was struggling to adjust it when he was startled by a voice behind him saying: "Let me assist you."

Now, to be found in a cemetery at midnight trying to put on your own shroud is not a pleasant position, so you can imagine how disagreeable the surprise was.

The one who spoke was Father Grimbot, the guardian of the place, an old original, well known to all the surrounding wineshops. He approached M. Mathias, looking at him with a pleasant smile.

"How! is that you, M. Mathias, already?"

M. Mathias, very much embarrassed, tried to distort his features, thinking a sinister appearance would rid him of this troublesome fellow. But no, Grimbot gave him a benevolent pat on the shoulder, dexterously arranging his shroud.

"I have just come from my tomb," said M. Mathias in a sepulchral voice.

"Ah, that is plainly to be seen," interrupted Grimbot; "but you are in a greater hurry than the others."

M. Mathias never stopped to listen, but walked off with long strides on the tips of his toes, like a phantom. Grimbot, marching by his side, continued: "Yes, the others never came out so soon—always waited a month or two."

M. Mathias turned suddenly upon him, waving his winding sheet in the air. "Go," he cried in a hollow voice; "leave me; this is sacrilege."

"There now," said Grimbot, becoming fatherly, "I won't worry you; you only want to take a little promenade, like the others."

M. Mathias, very much annoyed, went straight on, disdaining to reply. He saw the entrance to the cemetery just in front of him. Being a man of precautions, he had some louis in his pocket. "Say no more," said he, holding out the pieces of gold. "Give me the key."

Grimbot drew back a step. "The key—you want the key. Well, that is a fancy."

"Four guineas," groaned M. Mathias, extending more gold.

Grimbot pushed aside the proffered handful, and said:

"You know, now that you are out of the chapel, I will not oppose your taking a little walk like the others."

"The others? What others?"

Grimbot made a sweeping gesture. "The dead."

"The dead! What dead are you talking of? I am living, don't you see?"

"Bless my soul, this is a good joke, but I am a jolly fellow. Come and take a glass with me." His hand fell like pinchers on the wrist of M. Mathias. He dragged him to the little building where he lodged, and pushed him into a room on the ground floor.

M. Mathias was actually dumfounded. Grimbot closed the door, took a bottle from the table, filled two glasses, and holding one up said, "Your health, M. Mathias."

"Listen to me, my good man. You love a joke; that's all right. Only there's a time for all things. For personal reasons I allowed myself to be interred, but now I want to go out. It is a serious affair. I will pay you well; you shall not lose by it."

Whilst he spoke, Grimbot turned away from the table and placed his back against the door.

"You talk well," he sneered. "Ah, you are not the first one. I have heard them talk like that before, you see. I love my people. Every night one or two of them come and take a glass with me. Yesterday it was the notary Randal—you know him well, he is your neighbor; the one with the broken column on his grave. Day before yesterday it was Mme. Claudine, a beautiful woman. Ah! I am a good fellow. I allow them all to come out and take the air."

M. Mathias turned pale. Grimbot spoke with such perfect sang froid, the firm responsibility of a functionary not to be influenced. He was a broad shouldered, thick set fellow, with the hands of a guerrilla, his eyes burning with a smoldering fire. M. Mathias shuddered. This man was evidently mad, filled with strange hallucinations. He believed his cemetery was peopled with returned spirits, and held high carnival with those phantom beings every night. He lived in a fantastic world created by his drunken imagination, and actually confounded the living with the dead.

M. Mathias begged, prayed, protested, finally became coaxing. How could the intelligent Grimbot mistake him for a dead man? It was absurd.

"Come," said Gambot in a decided tone. "Enough of this. Be reasonable and return."

"Return where?"

"To your place in the angle of the third division."

"What; to my tomb? Never!"

"You will not? Well, we will see."

M. Mathias looked at those enormous hands and shook with fright. He glanced around, seeking some way of escape; only one, the door, and before it stood Grimbot like a buttress. No matter, he must pass it, at any price. He made a rush.

Grimbot coolly stretched out his open hand and seized the throat of his aggressor. M. Mathias, gasping and struggling to be free, hung from the end of those sinewy arms, his legs dangling, his body writhing in convulsions. The clutch of those enormous hands tightened—a gurgling, sinister sound—then all was still.

Grimbot, who had seen so many others, threw him across his shoulders and carried him with the firm and dignified step of the faithful guardian to the chapel, cast him into the crypt, replaced the stone with a turn of his foot, then continued his way across the tombs, muttering:

"He will not come out of there again soon. Not if I am here."

And thus the charming widow of M. Mathias was able to marry the one she had always loved.—[Translated from the French of Jules Lermina by M. E. B.

Revolutionary widows were first pensioned by act of July 4, 1836. There are about 30 "Revolutionary widows," but there are few sons of Revolutionary veterans. Hamilton Fish is one; of course there are others.—[New York Sun.

"Illinois" is derived from the Algonquin word "Inini," which the French pronounced "Illini." It signified "the men perfect and accomplished," with the implication that other aborigines were beasts. The suffix "ois" is French and denotes tribe.

Pensions were paid to Revolutionary soldiers under the act of the Continental Congress of August 26, 1776; from June 7, 1785, to September 29, 1789, the States paid the pensions. Since the last date the United States has paid them. Pensions were paid only to men who had received "known wounds;" privates received not more than $5 a month. Later acts increased this rate to $8 a month, and to full pay.

Sir Evelyn Wood has issued an order for experimenting in horseshoeing, to be carried out by the cavalry and artillery at Aldershot. Six horses are to be shod fore and hind on the near side with machine made, on the off side with hand made shoes, identical in pattern, weight, and dimensions. These horses will be ridden on the high roads a distance of 15 miles a day for 10 days. A team of four horses of horse artillery will be shod in the same manner and worked in draught. A report of the relative wear of the two descriptions will be made.

The keeper of the Bear Island light, Maine, is the owner of an intelligent dog. When the steamer passes the light it whistles its salute, and in response the light keeper rings his bell, or rather did ring before the dog took the job out of his hands. "Seeing that the passing of a boat and the ringing of the bell were two things that went together, the dog took it into his own hands—or mouth—to ring the bell, and when a boat comes along, without waiting for her whistle, he seizes the bell rope with his teeth and rings a vigorous salute.

THE SWITCHTENDER.

A little white house seemed asleep among the blossoming apple trees. It was early morning, and all was light and freshness. The door opened; a man appeared at the threshold, a smile on his face and an expectant look in his eyes. There was a movement behind the trunk of an apple tree. The man's smile grew broader, and from the tree, like a dryad, rushed a charming little flaxen haired girl, who threw herself with a burst of laughter into his arms.

"May I take the little one, Celine?" said the father.

"Again!" she said, with a shade of annoyance.

"Oh, we share her very fairly," said the man, with the kindest and most paternal smile. "If you knew," he resumed, "how quickly the hours pass when she is down there with me."

"Don't you think I know, when I find them so long in her absence?"

It was embarrassing. Aimee herself began to be troubled by this conversation, and feeling that she could not please both these beings that she loved so much, she was ready to cry. Celine saw it at once and yielded.

"Take her, Laurence; I would rather have her go than feel badly about it."

"No," said he in his turn, "keep her—you deserve it; you love her best."

The discussion began again, but it was this time a struggle of generosity. At last the husband took his darling in his arms, and a smile reappeared on the child's lips.

One morning, without saying anything to Celine, Laurence took the little girl's hand to lead her away, when her mother suddenly appeared.

"What!" she said. "You would take her without telling me?"

"Don't think that," said Laurence, in some confusion. "We were in fun—we were going to hide behind the trees and see you look for us."

"Listen, Laurence," she continued. "Aimee grows more restless and troublesome every day. It is dangerous to let her go with you."

"What do you mean?" said the man, turning pale.

"I mean that I am afraid of your railroad, with its trains and locomotives."

"You are very foolish."

"Leave her here. I can hardly breathe while my little girl is down there. It is frightful to think of it, but she might get away and be killed."

"Don't talk so, Celine."

"She might run away while you are at the switch, and if you left it to look after her, you would fail in your duty, and might be the cause of a dreadful disaster."

The young woman did not insist. The switchtender gradually recovered himself.

Celine smiled, and the conversation ended as usual with these words from Laurence:

"You will come for her at noon."

Little by little their terrors faded away. Laurence reasoned with himself.

"The child," he said, "is familiar with the passage of trains, it is true, but she is old enough to comprehend the danger." And his apprehension vanished.

One evening, however, when he went home he found he had been preceded by the rumor of an accident which had occurred at a neighboring station. A brakeman had been crushed by an express train. Celine questioned her husband while they were at supper.

"Is it true that Simon is killed?" she asked.

"No," replied Laurence, "he was in great danger, but he escaped, thanks to his wonderful coolness."

"Then he is not dead?" said Celine.

"No; and yet the whole train went over him. When Simon saw it was too late to save himself, he laid flat down in the middle of the track, and when the train passed by he got up again safe and sound. I saw him. I asked him how it made him feel. At first, he said, when the engine went over him, he was very warm; after that the time seemed long. That was all. You know Simon is not easily frightened. He is ready to go to work again," added Laurence tranquilly.

Some time after that the hours of service were changed and Laurence took the night section. He could no longer think of taking Aimee with him.

One evening, however, a poor woman in the village was taken very ill. The doctor who came wrote a prescription and said to the neighbors he found there:

"These medicines can only be had in the town and you must not wait for them. Let one of you go to the railway station, where there is a portable pharmacy, and ask the station master on my account for a little laudanum. That will quiet the pains till you can have the prescription. Which of you will go?"

"Celine! Celine!" said several voices. It was certain that the station master would not hesitate to give her the medicine.

The young woman thought of leaving Aimee, but, as she had been particularly restless all day, Celine concluded to take her. They had to pass Laurence's post to go to the station. He saw them coming, and as soon as they were within hearing, began to question them.

"Old Gertrude is very ill, and I am going to the station for medicine."

"That's right. But let me have Aimee; I will keep her till you come back."

Celine lifted the little girl over the fence to her father, who took the precious burden in his arms and returned with her to his box, before which a lamp was burning. Darkness covered the tracks, which crossed in every direction.

It would not take Celine more than 20 minutes to get to the station and back. The child was in one of her most frolicsome moods; and she ran suddenly into the garden; Laurence ran laughing after her.

"You can't catch me," said she.

"Yes, I can."

But the little witch evaded Laurence's pursuit, leaving laughter behind her.

"Here, here!" she said, and rushing to the track began to cross it.

"Don't go there, darling," said her father.

It was very dark—the switchtender could hardly see his daughter.

"You can't catch me," repeated the child.

"Come, come here," said her father.

"Look for me," answered the child.

"Aimee, Aimee, don't play any more. I shall be angry. Come here."

"Oh, you say that because you can't catch me!"

"Yes, I don't want you to stay there. The express train is coming."

"Oh! I shan't let you catch me. The train has gone by."

"There is another."

Instead of replying the child said:

Run after me, papa, run."

Laurence saw there was nothing to be done but to run after her, and take her out of danger. He rushed toward the place where he heard her voice. It was dark, and Aimee escaped him still. His alarm increased. At any instant the whistle of the oncoming train might be heard, and Laurence redoubled his appeals. His voice was hoarse with fright; the fatal moment approached, and still the child laughed and repeated:

"You can't catch me."

Now the whistle sounded. The lugubrious call paralyzed the poor man, and he lost his head completely. The train would have two victims if he did not regain his composure. Two victims! It would be a catastrophe with incalculable consequences; for a train was stopping at the station a little way ahead, and if the express was not switched off there must inevitably be a collision. Laurence shook off his torpor.

"Aimee!" he cried in thundering tones.

"Here, papa." And the child continued to give sharp little calls, which mingled in the roar of the approaching engine.

The instinct of duty rather than will urged Laurence toward the switch. He seized the instrument which ought to turn the train.

"No," he exclaimed, "I must save her. Aimee, Aimee! where are you?" and his eyes sought to pierce the darkness.

The switchtender, with hair on end, thought of throwing himself before the iron monster. But one chance remained—that Aimee was not on the track over which the train must pass. He looked again. He saw her—he saw her. She was there, standing on the very track the train must take if he altered the switch. If the iron tempest did not take its true course the child was saved. The train would go on to crash against the one at the station. What matter? Aimee would be alive! All this went through his mind like lightning. They would be killed and wounded—twenty families in despair, but Aimee would be safe and sound. There would be an inquest; he would be condemned to prison, dishonored, ruined! But his daughter, his little Aimee, would live and be happy. Ah! how quickly one can think in such terrible moments!

The train came thundering on, but it could not be seen on account of a sharp curve in the road. There was still time to save Aimee, but the child would not stir. It seemed to her father that she waited for the train with an air of defiance.

"Aimee," he repeated, in a voice strangled by fear, "Aimee, come here!"

Suddenly the advancing lights of the engine appeared. The train was upon him; it was here. The man felt his whole being shake. He was bewildered—could see nothing; thought did not stop, however, but traveled faster than the train. He recalled in a second his honorable soldier's life, when he had sacrificed everything to duty. He saw in the station the frightful accident he would have caused, and heard the cries of the wounded, the last gasps of the dying. The problem was before him—his daughter or others? There was no alternative without a miracle.

With astonishing promptitude the sentiment of duty became most powerful, and he seized mechanically the handle of the iron bar. The stoical soldier at this moment was uppermost, and effaced the father. He pushed, hardly knowing what he did, and the express train crossed the switch.

On, on it went, and he could see it passing before the station, going by as if it were happy to escape a danger, and disappearing in the darkness. Duty had been strongest. Stupefied, staggered, speechless, Laurence was rooted to the spot, holding still the cursed handle which had helped him to kill his child.

"Now," he said, "it is my turn to die."

The other train was about to pass. He stepped forward, crossed his arms, and awaited it. The whistle sounded, the heaving engine puffed.

Bewildered, thinking of nothing, there he stood.

But that instant a burst of laughter sounded behind him. He turned, wild with hope.

"Oh, naughty papa! he won't play with Aimee," said the most beloved of voices.

The child was clinging to him. Laurence did not seek to know how the child came there alive. He seized her and fled with his treasure into his little cabin. Then he put her on the ground before the lamp and looked at her. He could not bear so much joy, and fell fainting beside his daughter, who, in her turn, screamed with terror.

At this moment Celine arrived. She heard her child's voice, and hastened her steps. Then, becoming impatient, she called:

"Aimee!"

The child ran to meet her, crying:

"Mamma, mamma, I am frightened!"

"What is the matter?"

"Papa has fallen down."

Celine rushed toward the sentry box and found her husband completely insensible, stretched on the ground. She sent for help, and the doctor, who had not left the village, came and restored the poor man to consciousness. The next day when Laurence rose his wife looked at him with terror. Instead of his former bright color he exhibited a corpse like pallor, which never left him to the end of his days. Laurence was forced to tell his wife all. When he had finished, the poor father turned to Aimee, and said:

"But, darling, why weren't you killed?"

"Why," said the child, "I did what Simon did."

A REMARKABLY CHEAP TRIp.

THE SINGULAR STORY OF A VERMONT MAN'S WANDERINGS.

A special dispatch says: When Town Representative Edward Smith, of Pittsford, Vt., left his family and his farm on April 23 and dropped out of sight, people thought it strange because he was a prudent farmer and was fond of his family. The reasons for his flight were as mysterious as the manner of his disappearance, and no trace of him could be found anywhere. He had $500 with him which he had drawn from the bank. He just had the grip, and his doctor was sure that it had affected his mind.

When Smith's wife arose yesterday morning she found him asleep on the lounge. His cloths were dusty and torn and his shoes were nearly worn out. When he awoke he told this story of his absence.

Part of a time seems a blank to me and part like a dream. I know my head felt queer that morning. I remember going to Rutland and getting the money from the bank and the next thing I recall is riding on the cars in the night. I left the cars in a large building. There was a big crowd and a terrible din. I followed the crowd up a flight of stairs. This must have been in New York. Fulton ferry is the next thing I recollect, and then Baltimore. It seemed to me all the time that I must warm my body and cool my head, and that there was a place where I could do it if I could only find it. The back of my head felt as though there was a buzz saw tearing around in there, while the top felt as though it was being moved to and fro very rapidly. While Sulphur Springs, National Springs and Rancevert are the next places I remember. Then I was on the Indian river, in the midst of orange groves, in a boat loaded with oranges and pineapples. I went a long way on this boat. Then I remember a large white hotel at a place I think they called Lake Worth. I don't know how long I staid there. I went out and saw a pineapple plantation. All this time I was trying to get to the place where I could find relief for my head, and it seemed as though that place was on the coast.

"I think that then I must have started back toward home by the same way I had come, for I remember seeing things I saw on the way down. I came to Rancevort, and there my head seemed to feel better, and I realized that I was away from home. My desire to get home was so great that I could not seem to go over the ground fast enough, and I walked from the rear end of the train to the front to get along faster. When I reached Richmond I went to Newport News, and there took a steamer and went to Norfolk, and from there to New York. I reached New York about 9 o'clock last Sunday night, and went to a hotel. About noon Monday I took a train for Rutland and reached there at night. I could not wait for a train to Pittsford, so I walked home and got here some time in the morning I don't remember buying any ticket or having trouble with any one. I had just $500 that I drew out of the bank the day before I started and I have got $360 left. I do not see how I could have gone the distance I think I did on the amount. I don't remember paying out a single cent for anything, but of course I did. My head feels all right, and as soon as I can get a little rest I shall be all right."

A Little Girl's Experience in a Lighthouse

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trescott are keepers of the Gov. Lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter four years old. Last April she was taken down with measles, followed with a dreadful cough and turning into a fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones".—Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and a half bottles, was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you may get a trial bottle free at C. M. Parrish's Drug Store.

BROOKLYN, CONN., May 5, '90.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.:

Sirs:—Last Summer I cured a Curb upon my horse with your celebrated Kendall's Spavin Cure and it was the best job I ever saw done. I have a dozen empty bottles, having used it with perfect success, curing every thing I tried it on. My neighbor had a horse with a very bad Spavin that made him lame. He asked me how to cure it. I recommended Kendall's Spavin Cure. He cured the Spavin in just three weeks.

Yours respectfully, WOLCOTT WITTER.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 4, '90.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.:

Dear Sirs:—I have been selling more of Kendall's Spavin Cure and Flint's Condition Powders than ever before. One man said to me, it was the best Powder I ever kept and the best he ever used.

Respectfully, OTTO L. HOFFMAN.

CHITTENANGO, N. Y., May 13, '90.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.,

Dear Sirs:—I have used several bottles of your Kendall's Spavin Cure with perfect success, on a valuable and blooded mare that was quite lame with a Bone Spavin. The mare is now entirely free from lameness and shows no bunch on the joint.

Respectfully, F. H. HUTCHINS.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

MONROE, La., May 5, '90.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.,

Gents:—I think it my duty to render you my thanks for your far famed Kendall's Spavin Cure. I had a four year old filly which I prized very highly. She had a very severe swollen leg. I tried about eight different Kinds of medicines which did no good. I purchased a bottle of your Kendall's Spavin Cure which cured her in four days.

I remain yours, MARION DOWDEN.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vermont.

Harry Kinsell Very Sick.

In Friday's Tyrone correspondence of the Altoona Times appeared the following:

A message yesterday afternoon to Harry C. Love, of this place announced the fact that his nephew, Harry Kinsell, was lying at the point of death at his home in Atlanta, Georgia. Mr. Love left last night for that city.

Mr. Kinsell is a young man of good qualities and rare possibilities. He is a nephew of our townsman, John G. Love, Esq., and has frequently visited in Bellefonte. He has many friends in the upper part of Centre County, where all his boyhood days were spent, who will anxiously watch and hope for his speedy recovery.

LATER: From the Tyrone Herald: H. C. and W. S. Love received word yesterday that their nephew Harry C. Kinsell, was lying critically ill at Atlanta, Georgia, where he had been employed for about a year as a civil engineer. H. C. Love departed last evening for the southern state, but during the night a message was received in Tyrone conveying the sad intelligence of the sick man's death at 9.12 o'clock last night. About two weeks ago, while out surveying he was almost overcome by the intense heat, from the effect of which he died, the direct cause of death being congestion of the brain. The deceased took a short civil engineering course at Pennsylvania State College. Harry was a general favorite and his death will be keenly felt by all his many friends. The remains will be brought back to Tyrone about Monday for interment.

Across the Deep, to the Far West,

On steamboats, cars and stage-coaches. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is carried as the most important item in the materia medica of the traveling public. It deprives vitiated, brackish water of its hurtful propertirs and execrable flaver, counteracts the pernicious effect upon the stomach of bad or indigestible food, remedies cramps, heartburn and wind upon the stomach. It is a fine defense against malarial disorders, nullifies the effect of excessive heat cold and damp, relieves sick-headache, and is an incomparable cure for costiveness and billiousness. The fatigue of travel often tells most disastrously upon invalids and convalescents, occasionally to such an extent as to jeopardize life. Person in feeble health, apprehensive of bad effect from travel, will, if provided with the Bitters, be far less likely to have their fears realized.

Full of Entertainments.

The next fortnight will be a lively one all around for Bellefonte. On Wednesday of this week the Catholic school will give their entertainment in the opera house. On Friday evening Miss Bishop will give her last and grandest Assembly. On Saturday Washburn & Arlington railroad circus will exhibit in Belletonte. On Sunday the baccalaureate sermon will be preached at State College. Next week will be the week of the College Commencement, an event always looked forward to with considerable pleasure by many Bellefonters; and the fortnight will close with the celebration of the fourth, when Bellefonte will do her best in commemoration of the greatest event in America history. If the people of Centre and adjoining counties desire seeing a grand demonstration and having a really good time they want to lay aside all business cares and work on that day and come to Bellefonte and enjoy themselves freely and fully. There will be lots here to see and amuse and nobody need fear a disappointment.

Game Laws of 1891.

Under the laws of Pennsylvania the time for killing game and taking fish is as follows:

Woodcock. July 4 to January 1; quail or Virginia partridge, Nov. 1 to December 15; ruffled grouse, commonly called pheasant, or pinnated grouse, commonly called prairie chicken, October 1 to January 1; rail bird or reed bird, September 1 to December 1; elk, wild deer or antelope, October 1 to December 16; gray, black or fox squirrel, September 1 to January 1: hare commonly called rabbit, November 1 to January 1; wild turkey, October 15 to January 1; wild fowl, September 1 to May 1 upland or grass plower, July 15 to January 1; sea salmon, April 1 to August 1; spreckled trout April 15 to July 15; lake trout, January 1 to September 30. German crap, September 1 to May 1; black bass, green bass, yellow bass, willow bass, rock bass, Lake Erie or green bass, May 30 to January 1; pike or pickerel, June 1 to January 1; shad December 31 to June 20; Susquehanna salmon, May 30 to January 1.

The Weather and the Crops.

The weather crop bulletin issued by the Pennsylvania state weather service contains the following relative to the weather and the progress of the crops for the week ending June 19:

The very warm weather and generous rains of the past week gave an additional vigor and rapid growth to vegetation, and the crop prospects have a very encouraging outlook. Bountiful harvests are anticipated throughout the Cumberland, Schuylkill and Lebanon valleys. Wheat is coloring rapidly and will be ready to harvest by the 4th of July. Many correspondents state that it never looked better. The recent favorable weather conditions have improved oats, and the crop will be a better one than was thought possible early in the season. Owing to the cold and drought corn germinated badly and was slow in getting started. In several sections the ground was too hard packed to plow in time for planting. The recent rains did much to help the growing grass, but the growth was so retarded under previous condition that the yield will be below that of previous seasons. The haying season has already commenced and will be quite general when the weather becomes favorable for curing. The fruit crop will be large. A very large acreage of potatoes have been planted, and an unusually large number of tobacco plants have been set out which are now growing rapidly.

4 Mothers, 10 Children

These children are being brought up on Castoria. Read what the mothers say about Castoria. There is no opium, morphine or other narcotic substance in Castoria. The formula is printed on the wrapper of every bottle. It is perfectly harmless, pleasant to take and positively effective. Physicians prescribe Castoria, mothers give Castoria, and children cry for Castoria. It gives the child health and the mother rest.

"I certify that little Robbie Hale, of 466 Portland Avenue, St. Paul, was a thin, crying baby from his birth until he was given Castoria. He began to improve from the first week's trial. Has taken 13 bottles; is perfectly well; weighed 30 pounds the day he was 7 months old, and when this picture was taken. Robbie's changed condition has caused many mothers to use Castoria. It is the best thing for babies I have ever known."

"I enclose you photograph of my 'triplets,' 2 boys and 1 girl—Maggie, Petie and Willie. I owe their health and strength to Castoria. It was through my neighbors' urgent appeals that I commenced its use, as both my boys were thin and inclined to be sickly. At present they are fat and hearty, they weigh 8, 8½ and 9½ pounds, and are 2 months and 3 days old."

MRS. MARY KLINGER.
726 Cortland Ave.,
New York, May 23d, 1887.

"I enclose you photograph of my quartette, 4 girls. They are now 2 weeks old. The smallest weighs 5 pounds, the others 8 pounds each. My other children have all gained health and strength from the use of Castoria, and I have already commenced giving it to my little darlings."

A Would-Be Eloper Killed.

McKEESPORT, Pa., June 23.—The families of William Myers and Mr. Harding, both mill men, have been living within stone throw of each other for years and become very friendly. Last night about 9 o'clock Harding called Myers over for a friendly chat. Myers responded, but Harding was obliged to leave the room for a few minutes. When he returned his wife lay outside the door dangerously wounded, while Myers was stretched out inside with a bullet through his brain. Mrs. Harding, who is shot in three places, bnt not fatally, says Myers avowed his love for her and asked her to elope with him to Germany. She reufsed with the above result. Both parties are considered respectable and have children.

THEY DISCUSS PLANS FOR '92.

THE YOUNG LADIES MUTUAL ADMIRATION SOCIETY MEANS BUSINESS.

The Mafia in New Orleans has many a sorrow and many a heart-ache but it will be a nothing to the heartaches and sorrows that will be caused to a certain class of the population of Bellefonte if strenuous efforts are not soon made by the proper authorities to break up the mystic Y. L. M. A. S. which flourishes in Bellefonte—yea, is gaining ground and new members every meeting night—and which is continually planning and plotting against the peace of mind and single blessedness of the young gentry of Bellefonte, with a tendency towards an ultimate result of forever destroying their present peaceful serenity and landing them into a state of double cussedness, if not the institution owned and controlled by the state and located at Danville.

Already there are quite a number of our best youug men who have thus been marked with effect. For instance: There is Thomas A. Shoemaker, Robert L. Hunter, George Jackson, Jr., W. I. Swoope, Esq., Hard P. Harris, John Blanchard, H. C. Quigley, and we might name a score or so of others who have been put on the list and whose very life, even, is in danger; in fact, it is very evident that with some of the parties above mentioned it has already become a question of "life or death."

And the story is not half told. Had the Y. L. M. A. S. confined itself to a campaign of individual tactics it would not be so bad, but at the Society's last regular meeting it was ordained and enacted that a regular compound, double-acting, sure-as-death, none-can-escape campaign is to be inaugurated for 1892—leap year—and that then, when everybody is deeply interested in the Presidential campaign, is when the big work is to be done; then is when the gallant young men of our town are to be "hooked and landed—jerked out of the frivolous society and plunged head long into that raging, dashing, billowy sea of matrimony.

Young man, forewarned is forearmed; if you have any desire to avoid this plotting against you take the advise of "one who knows" and march up to the Register's office, pay your fifty cents like a man, get your paper blank, present it at the next regular meeting of this society and it will only take a minute to fill in the name and admit you as an honorary member of the society, with the same privileges as the president. Then you can sit in a big chair and elevate your feet on the table while you slowly sip your "soft drink," or you can sit on the table and smoke cigarettes discussing meanwhile the best way to make another catch and the most available spot to throw out the bait.

The young ladies they thought they were quiet;
That 'twas simply twixt you and me:
But a watchful young man o'erheard them discuss
Their campaign of ninety-two.

ONE WHO KNOWS.

Resigned from Poor Oversear

TO THE PUBLIC:—I take this way of notifying my friends, the poor of Bellefonte and the public in general that I have resigned from the Borough of Bellefonte. This action was taken because of my trip across the ocean, when it wont be possible for me to be here and attend to the duties of my office. There are cases on hand that require constant looking after and, as I will be absent for several months, I deem it but just that I should resign and that some other man take the responsibility of caring for the unfortunate. Thanking all my friends for past favors, I am faithfully yours.

JAMES SCHOFIELD.

ABOUT SPRING FEVER.

Who hasn't suffered from this disease? We say disease advisedly, for such it is. It is a general relaxation of the system that makes the victim averse to exertion. Unless the constitution is keyed up when these symptoms appear, some acute malady attacks the most vulnerable point and life is endangered. A good stimulant promptly and properly used soon tones up the weak spots. Leading physicians of the land invariably recommend the use of Pure Rye Whiskey in such cases. Max Klein's "Silver Age" and "Duquesne" Rye Whiskies are sold under a sworn guarantee of purity so that the consumer takes no risk—"Silver Age" at $1.50 and "Duquesne" at $1.25 per full quart bottle. Mr. Klein also keeps the largest and choicest stock of Brandies, Wines, etc., in Pennsylvania. Goods are sent by express everywhere. Write for Catalogue and Price List (mentioning this paper) to Max Klein, 82 Federal street, Allegheny City.

America's Inexhaustible Coal Supply.

To get an idea of the probably inexhaustible coal supply, compare America with England. Some years ago an investigation was made to ascertain how long the supply of coal would last in that country. The drain upon the mines there is not alone for the manufacturing in Sheffield, Manchester, London and the other cities, but English coal is exported to far away countries.

In 1874 the output of the mines of the world was 260,000,000 tons, of which England furnished 125,000,000, tons, or about one-half. Investigation showed that the supply, within 4,000 feet of the surface, which was available, was so great that this average of 125,000,000 tons a year it would not be exhausted for 1,120 years. England has a coal area of 12,000 square miles, while in the United States the area is 120,000, or ten times as great. Consequently if one-half the output for the world were to come from this country at the rate of consumption when the investigation was made the supply would last 11,200 years.

But it has been found that as the world grows the consumption of coal increases in a geometric ratio, so that this period cannot be counted on as the time when the supply will be exhausted. It is enough to say that the supply in the United States is practically inexhaustible, and that as a coal producing country the United States is without a rival.—Interview in New York "Times."

The Circus.

Washburn & Arlington circus arrived here this morning, at 11 o'clock made a street parade, having two band chariots; a Wild West turnout, and a number of horsemen, squaws, Indians and Arabs. Soon after 2 o'clock the afternoon performance was begun in the tent on Middleton avenue before a good-sized gathering of spectators, who, judging by the good work of the opening acts, enjoyed a very good performance. There was none of the objectionable outside features found with many circuses. All attention was given to the ring performance, which, besides the usual circus business, riding clown, etc., had the following specialties, all good: Trapeze act, climbing, etc., by Mlle. Adele; double horizontal bar work, by Brown Brothers; slack wire, trained dogs and juggling. The performance closed with a good Wild West performance, showing some excellent horsemanship.

The battalion of the apprentice boys occupied reserved seats in a body, and were enthusiastic applauders of all good work. The company gives another performance this evening.—Newport (R I) News, June 4.

Will exhibit in Bellefonte on Saturday next.

Strayed or Stolen.

A bay horse about eight years old, weighs about 1050 pounds, a top buggy, side springs and an old harness. The harness was somewhat eaten by rats. The name of W. Moor is on the buggy seat under the cushion. The same was found near this place secreted in the woods on June 7th. The said property is supposed to have been brought here by a thief by the name of William Vincent, formerly from Lock Haven. Said property is supposed to have been stolen in Clinton or Clearfield counties Address, Guy C. Hollon, county detective, Towanda, Pa.

The Eight-Hour Movement.

PITTSBURGH, June 23.—All efforts to have the carpenters' and builders' associations to meet to compromise on the strike have failed, and affairs are far worse than before. The carpenters say a mammoth combination of corporations and individuals has been formed against them in order to smother the eight-hour's system in its birthplace in this city. The move cannot spread over the country with any assurance of success. The Federation of Labor is behind the carpenters, and yesterday paid them three weeks' strike benefits.

No more dastardly business was ever engaged in by the lowest wretch than the attempt which has been made by certain men and certain newspapers to connect Postmaster General Wanamaker and other members of the administration with the late crooked bank failures in Philadelphia. That the attempt failed for lack of foundation removes not one iota of the stigma of infamy from the brows of those who originated it.

VANDERBILT'S $2,000 WHIP.

IT IS THE MOST BEAUTIFUL THING OF ITS KIND IN EXISTENCE.

Probably the most remarkable whip ever made is that now owned by the Vanderbilt family and formerly the property of the late W. H. Vanderbilt. The history of this has never yet been recorded.

In the fall of 1880 the Jackson & Wooden Car Company, of Berwick, Penn., wanted to present Mr. Vanderbilt with a token of their appreciation and Mr. Jackson decided upon a fine whip. Fritz Kaldenburg, the ivory sculptor, was consulted about the matter and made a design to cost $2,000, which was accepted.

The whip and ivory stock, before any carving was done, cost $600, and was made in Westfield, Conn. It was seven feet long. Above the stock the whip was made of solid whalebone, then worth $3 per pound, and now scarce at $10. Over this solid whalebone was the finest braiding of split tapered whalebone ever attempted. The braiding of the whip and the making of the snapper occupied one whole month.

The case for the whip cost $100, and after the death of Wm. H. Vanderbilt the makers tried to purchase it from Cornelius for advertising purposes, but the offer was rejected, although a fabulous price was mentioned. The handle is of the purest ivory, 21 inches long and one and one half inches thick at the butt end, which is an ornamental capitol, from which a floral pattern emanates, emblematic of power, truth and perpetuity, which encircles four panels. In each panel is a wonderful piece of carving, on one side a locomotive and train of cars, on the other a steamboat, symbolizing the foundation of Cornelius Vanderbilt's great achievements. On the third and fourth panels are the achievements of W. H. Vanderbilt's genius, the Grand Central Railroad Depot on one, and on the other himself in a buggy driving his celebrated fast horses on the road. On the end of the handle are two portrait busts in high relief of Cornelius and W. H. Vanderbilt, father and son.

Too much praise cannot be bestowd upon the artistic detail, for, large as the handle is, the immense amount of work and design had to be done in miniature, and the locomotive, though only three quarters of an inch high, including smokestack, was yet perfect in detail, some of the valves, nuts, brakes, etc, being no larger than a pin's point; also William H., in his buggy his head no larger than that of a pin, is a good portrait and full of expression. This whip is sacredly kept in a glass case among the art treasures of the Vanderbilt gallery, and in future generations will be treasured as a work of art, even though it is simply a whip.

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and we ask you to try Hood's Peculiar Sarsaparilla. It strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. The peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation of the vegetable remedies used give to Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar curative powers. No To Itself other medicine has such a record of wonderful cures. If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other instead. It is a Peculiar Medicine, and is worthy your confidence.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

PASTOR KOENIGS NERVE TONIC

In Its Worst Form.

BENTON, Laf. Co., Wis., Dec., 1888.

Rev. J. C. Bergen vouches for the following: James Rooney, who was suffering from St. Vitus Dance in its worst form for about 1½ years, was treated by several physicians without effect. Two bottles of Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic cured him.

Would Have Died.

HOLYOKE, Mass., November, 1890.

I was in pain all over, could get no rest either night or day and was not able to do any work for months, but after taking Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic only one week, I was able to sit up and attend to my dressmaking. I had paid over two hundred dollars to doctors and got no benefit. I certainly think I should have died long ago if I had not got this medicine.

The Columbian Express, via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The new fast train to Chicago by the Pennsylvania Railroad, which entered the service on June 7th as the Chicago Special, has been rechristened "The Columbian Express" in honor of the great fair. In bestowing this title on the new train, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has taken the initiative among the railroads in recognizing the merits of the World's Exposition by providing special facilities for the comfortable and speedy movements of visitors. The train is particularly worthy of bearing the honored title. It is the ripest example of train construction, as it contains accommodations for those who desire luxurious apartments as well as for those who seek the conforts of a well appointed passenger coach. The Pullman drawing-room sleeping and dining cars anq its cheery passenger coaches, are all vestibuled. The Columbian Express leaves New York 4.00 P. M., Philadelpeia 6.25 P. M., Harrisburg 9 30 P. M. every day, arriving. at Chicago 5.15 P. M. the next day

White Hair Fashionaale.

A rumor announcing the revival of white hair as the fashionable color of the future may be reasonably credited. Women who reject blondine and dyes as vulgar, yet crave effective contrasts, are eagerly seeking means for bleaching their locks altogether, as soon as the first touch of gray puts in an appearance. There is no doubt of it, white hair lends a look of distinction, and rather tends to freshen the complexion than otherwise. An artificial youthfulness is also gained; but be not deceived, nothing is so wearing on the possessor's taste as absolutely colorless hair. In time its owner grows to hate it, and unwearying care is necessary to maintain the immaculate purity and precision of arrangement that alone make white hair tolerable.

Drunkenness, or the Liquor Habit, Positively Cured by administering Dr. Haines' Golden Specific.

It is manufactured as a powder, which can be given in a glass of beer, a cup of coffee, or tea, or in food, without the knowledge of the patient. It is absolutely harmless, and will affect a permanent and speedy cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. It has been given in thousands of cases, and in every instance a perfect cure has followed. It never Fails. The system once impregnated with the Specific, it becomes an utter impossibility for the liquor appetite to exist. Cures guaranteed. 48 page book of particulars free. Address

How many democrats have given President Harrison credit for the generosity he displayed in appointing two democrats out of the five judges of the new private land claims court? Not one, as far as we know.

THE scheme to steal republican votes for a third party in the republican States of the west while the democrats keep the South solid, as usual, is rather too transparent to succeed.

THE cable news indicates that the Prince of Wales may, as co respondent in a divorce suit, be again given an opportunity to "perjure himself like a gentleman", as ago in a, at the time, celebrated case.

THE question "do monkeys talk"? is being discussed in the newspapers. We cannot understand to be positive about their talking, but proof exists, in the editorial columns of certain newspapers, that monkeys write.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

SLAUGHTER OF GIRL BABIES

TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND KILLED EVERY YEAR IN CHINA.

In China tens of thousands of recently born girls among the poorer classes are thrown out to perish, and at Shanghai I saw a tower formerly used to facilitate this infanticide, says Dr. Joseph Simms, who has recently returned from an extended trip of the Flowery Empire. It is practiced in every part of China but especially in the interior and in the Loess district. As soon as we get many miles from the coast it is quite u ual to see near a joss house or place of worship a small stone tower from ten to thirty feet high, with no door, but a hole in one side, reaching into a pit in the centre.

The children that parents wish to be rid of are thrown into this hole, and quicklime soon consumes the little forms. It has been estimated that every year nearly 200,000 female babies are brutally slaughtered in the Empire. One Chinaman being interrogated about the destruction of his recently born girl said, "The wife cry and cry, but kill all'ee same."

In every large city in China there are asylums for the care of orphans, supported and conducted by foreigners, who save yearly from slaugter tens of thousands of female infants. At Han-Kow, which is 600 miles inland, I visited a Roman Catholic orphanage for children that have thus been cast out to perish. Mother Paula Vismara, the lady superior of this institution, informed me that she had received seven that day, and one day thirty were brought in.

Of course these had never been consigned to a baby tower. Sometimes they are found wrapped in paper and left at the edge of the river. Sometimes they are buried alive by the father, but while yet living are dug up by some one else and brought to this institution. Several women are employed by the Mother Superior in looking about for the little victims. Upward of a thousand are received every year. Many of them, of course, die soon after from the exposure and neglect they have suffered through being apanboned, and many are boarded out by the institution in the town.

Those who accept the charges have to bring the children once a week for inspection, and then, all being right, they receive the pay for maintaining them. This is an Italian charity, and one of the most estimable in China. During the twenty-three years of its existence it has saved the lives of, say, 25,000 to 40,000 children, of whom a fair proportion have grown to womanhood. It received considerable support from the European residents at Han-Kow of whom there are about 120.

Those children who remain within the premises of the institution are fed and clothed, and when old enough taught to sew, make lace, knit stockings, and do other useful work. They never know where they came from or who their parents were. When they are four years of age their feet are bandaged, according to the general custom of all classes in China, to keep them small, as that increases their chances of marriage.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

THIS is the language of a great and fearless leader, who has no doubt about the result of a battle for the right. It was used by Maj. McKinley in speaking to the Ohio convention: "We do not confine ourselves to a single issue; our campaign means to cover every difference between the republican and democratic parties, State and National, principles and administration."

IT seems that a large number of Kansas farmers have already announced their intention to have nothing to do with the democratic adjunct organized at Cincinnati under the misleading name of "People's party". Kansas farmers always were noted for the possession of good hard horse sense.

FOR the sake of those who believe in the feasibility of the idea it is hoped that the announced intention of trying the sub-treasury plan in Kansas under the auspices of the Farmer's Alliance may be carried out. It will demonstrate whether the idea is good or bad in a manner that will carry conviction to all.

Dr. Cuyler tells the story of a little boy, the son of good Presbyterian parents, who was asked the question in the cathecism: "What is man's chief end?" and he answered it, "Man's chief end is to glorify God and annoy him forever." There are too many men, says Dr. Cuyler, who act as if that were their chief end.

The celebrated Scotch preacher, in his subversive sermon on the ark, mentioned the taunts of boys as among the severest trials of the patriarch Noah, when engaged on a shipbuilding enterprise for which there seemed no immediate occasion. "My brethren, there's naething sae evil as a human boy. If ye have a sair place in your heart, he'll just put his finger on it. And so, when Noah was leaving his bit yairdie in the evening, the boys would just look over the paling and cry, 'Noah, ma man, hoo's the airk getting on, and whan's the flood?'"—[London Daily News.

Economy in Dress.

A literary lady, who writes for the magazines, met a friend on the streets of Galveston. "You seem to be in high spirits. Heard some good news? Going to get married?" asked the friend. "Oh, no; it's better than that. I've just got a letter from the editor of the Ladies' Magazine inclosing a check for $50 in payment of my article on Economy in Dress, and I am going right now to buy me a new brocaded silk velvet dress, made in the latest style, if it takes every cent of the $50.—[Texas Siftings.

Mrs. B.—I'm sorry, but we haven't any jam, Willie.

Willie—Why, what do you keep in all them jars?

Mrs. B.—What jars?

Willie—Why, ma said you had more family jars'n any other woman she knew.—[Chicago Times.

Not Fresh.

The "tramp" nuisance is largely abated, at least in some parts of the country, but it has left its mark upon literature.

"Where is your wood pile, lady?" inquired a tramp, to whom the kind hearted housekeeper had given "a bite of something to eat."

"It's out in the shed. How thoughtful of you to offer to split some wood."

"Oh, I'm not going to split any wood. I want the axe to split this biscuit."—Boston Herald.

The Force of Circumstances.

Mrs. Peterby—Can you wash?

Matilda Snowball—Ob course I kin wash, if it has ter be.

"Can you cook?"

"If it has ter be, of course I kin cook."

"Are you honest?"

"You bet I'se honest, if I has ter be."—[Texas Siftings.

A Shrewd Poet.

Sanso—They say that poets are an unbusinesslike set of men, but I deny that. I know one who is very shrewd.

Rodd—Indeed!

Sanso—Yes. He never goes to submit a poem to an editor without first investing in an accident insurance policy.—[Harper's Bazar.

Foreign Chivalry.

American Heiress—And so you have fought a real duel. Now, to tell the truth, count, weren't you just the least bit frightened?

Foreign Count—No, madam; you see our seconds had extracted the bullets without our knowledge.—[Binghamton Republican.

An Important Point.

Algernon (on the steamer saying goodby to Ethel, in whose eyes he imagines he sees prospective tears)—Now, keep up, little girl, keep up.

Ethel—Keep up! Now tell me, do you

WHERE DID HE LIVE?

A MILLIONAIRE'S HEIRS ARE VERY ANXIOUS TO KNOW.

Special to the Tribune.

HUNTINGDON, Pa., June 17.—The settlement or the estate of L. A. Robertson, the millionaire owner of the Mapleton tannery, who died in Brooklyn a few months ago, promises to meet with very interesting entanglements. Letters of administration were granted on his estate by the register of Brooklyn a week after the decedent's death, and immediately thereafter a furore was created by the appearance of a woman, who alleged she was Robertson's wife, and laid claim to her right of dower. Robertson was known by all his friends and relatives as a bachelor. No one ever heard him speak of being married, and the woman in the case was challenged as an imposter, which was subsequently proven, and a confession of guilt thereafter secured.

Now a new complication has arisen. Certain relatives of the deceased, who will profit more liberal if they can show that Mr. Robertson was a resident of Pennsylvania, instead of New York, have had letters of administration issued by the register of Warren county, this state, so that now two different parties are acting as administrator, one under the laws of the state of New York and the other under the laws of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Robertson died intestate, leaving real and personal property worth $2,000,000, located principally in New York, Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Under the intestate laws of New York the surviving children of a decedent's dead uncle or aunt do not inherit the share of their father or mother, while in pennsylvania they do. That is to say, if Mr. Robertson had an uncle or an annt who died pefore he did, leaving children, under the laws of New York the children would not share in the estate. while in Pennsylvania they would inherit the interest of the deceased parent. Such a state of facts exists in this case, and the children of Mr. Robertson's deceased uncle or aunts are therefore trying to prove that their cousin was a resident of Pennsylvania at the time of his death and not a resident of New York. If they can succeed in proving this each will get a magnificent sum; if they fail, they will not be entitled to a cent. Mr. Robertson's uncles and aunts are anxious that their nephew's estate should be settled under the laws of New York, at the adjudication of the same there would make each of them richer to the extent of several hundred thousand dollars. No nearer relatives than uncles and aunts survive Mr. Robertson.

The register at Warren county, this state, issued the letter on evidence which showed that Mr. Robertson had resided in one of the townships of that county; that he had been registered there as a voter, and as such had paid a poll tax in 1889 and 1890. The letters of administration granted by the register of Brooklyn were based on the prima facie evidence that Mr. Robertson died in that city and had lived the most of his time at one of the principal hotels.

Another interesting feature of the case is found in the fact that if Mr. Robertson shall be declared to have been a resident of Pennsylvania, the state will collect a collateral inheritance tax on his $2,000,000 estate, no matter where the property is located; whereas if it shall be determined that at the time of his death he was a citizen of New York, this state will only collect its 5 per cent, on the value of what estate there may be found in Pennsylvania. The result of the contest, which can only be decided by the courts, is awayited with great interest. The Mapleton tannery has been apraised at $275,000 and the Warren county is worth $200,000.

The President at Cape May.

CAPE MAY, N. J., June 18—President and Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. Dimmick and two grand children, comprising the President's family accompanied by Mrs. George S. Williams and Miss Ella Warfield, arrived here by special train at 5 o'clock, and were immediately switched off the Delaware Bay Railroad and taken to Cape May Point, where they were received by Manager Hamilton and driven in a carriage to the President's cottage. The President will remain here until next Tuesday.

The Next Circus.

The weather did not loom up very favorable this morning for the first circus of the season, but by 10 o'clock the street assumed the air of more than usual importance. The parade of Washburn & Arlington's United Shows was made from the lot near the ball ground, where the tent was pitched, and through some of the principal streets. Two brass bands played lively airs during the entire rout. A steam calliope, manipulated by Irena Washburn, was also heard far above the music of the band.

After the first band chariot came the World's fair -two blonde ladies on horseback—and following behind were troups of Arabs, Indians and cowboys. There were also camels, donkeys, a clown and the usual retinue of small children closing up the procession. The continued wet weather kept many from attending the afternoon performance, but those present witnessed several interesting features. The show opened with a grand entree in which the whole company took part, Wild West, Moorish, caravan and all. The program included some excellent trapeze performances by Williams and Smith, and daring leaps through the air by Brown Brothers. There was also a very fine contortion act, some first class horizontal bar work, dancing barr act and the dog circus. The slack wire performance is one of the best ever seen here. Altogether it is a good show.—Meridan (Conn) Republican.

They Put Him Out.

On Thursday Calvin Miller, colored, while somewhat under the influence of to much "what not," made his way into the watch hall of the jail and took up a position at the door with the evident intention of staying there until he was ready to leave. Deputy sheriff Crawford ordered him out and as he didn't seem at all likely to go James Schofield, who had gone up the hill to have some fun, suggested that the put him out.

They made the attempt put Cal wasn't so easily but out and detective Mullen and Schofield together managed to get Miller outside the doors but on taking an inventory of themselves afterwards it was discovered that Schofield had a bad looking nose and that the slit in Mullen's coat run entirely up to the neck. The two gentleman were mad and if there had been a justice within five miles of Bellefonte Miller would have been arrested but, unfortunately all of Bellefonte Justices were out o. town.

The Saturday Half Holiday.

In many of the Pennsylvania inland towns the banks have given notice that they will observe the Saturday half holiday law from June 15th to September 15th. We have been told that the question has been under discussion by the bankers in Bellefonte but so far no decision has been reached. We have not the least doubt, whatever, but that all the hard-worked bankers would greatly appreciate the half holiday system.

A Hard Man To Find.

It is now very evident that John Wilson is a hard man to catch, almost as hard, by the way, as an absconding bank president. And again; it is about time that this monkey-business in identifying him plays out. A reward is offered for his delivery in Bellefonte. If any man has him leave him bring him here and get the reward. All together there has been already almost the amount of the reward expended in identifying the multitudinous Wilsons who have been captured hither and yon and yet the murder of Harry Waterhouse is no nearer being avenged to-day than it was six months ago.

And now that so much time has elapsed since the murderer has escaped his recapture is about as uncertain as the fruit crop of 1900. The man may be in the West Indies by this time and, for ought is known, he may be in Centre county. It would require but a small disguise to enable him to walk up High St., to the jail, take a look at the very window through which he made his escape, and then calmly return to the depot, buy a ticket, board the train and go out of Bellefonte in the same way and just as unconcerned as the man who never thought of murder. Such a thing could easily be done, though there is no denying the fact that it would take nerve to do it.

At this season of the year when malaria lurks in the air, and bad colds are an unfrequent visitor, we long for a quick and effective remedy. There is scarcely a home without a sufferer from some of the many ills the flesh is heir to. A stimulant is after the intermediate. It is quick and effective. It brings relief and saves doctors bills. We can recommend Mr. Max Klein for anything in the liquor line. His silverage Rye at $1.50 per quart is the best whiskey in the market. He will ship Pennsylvania Rye Whiskey six years old, at 1.00 for each quart or six for $5.00. Send for his price list and catalogue and mention this paper. An Important Case.

One of the most important and hotly contested cases tried at our present sessions of court was the case of the Commonwealth against Martin Donnelly and Peter Donnelly. The defendants were charged with larceny of brass from the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the receiving of the same. Messrs. Neff & Hicks represented the Commonwealth and Messrs. Greevy and Baldrige the defendants. The case occupied the most of Wednesday's session. Messrs. Baldrige and Hick's made the closing addresses in the cases. The jury found the defendants, guilty of receiving the stolen brasses knowing the same to have been stolen. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has for years been suffering from petty thievings of brass castings, and several attempts have been made to bring the guilty parties to justice. It is to be hoped that the conviction of the defendants in this case will have the effect of putting an end to this nefarious business, as the company will if possible break up not only the stealing, but also the purchasing of valuable brass and other metals.—Tribune.

Hanged for Killing a Constable.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 18.—Jacob Scheele was hanged in jail here, this morning at 10,30 for the murder of Louis Druke, on January 20, 1888. Constable Druke, while attempting to arrest Scheele, who resided at New Canan, for violating the liquor law, was shot by Scheele, who had concealed himself in an upper room in the house. Scheele then attempted suicide. He was arrested, tried, and to-day suffered the penalty of his crime. He met death calmly and died without a struggle.

Looking out over the many homes of this country, we see thousands of women wearing away their lives in household drudgery that might be materially lessened by the use of a few cakes of SAPOLIO. If an hour is saved each time a cake is used, if one less wrinkle gathers upon the face because the toil is lightened, she must be a foolish woman who would hesitate to make the experiment, and he a churlish husband who would grudge the few cents which it costs.

The engraving is good and it requires an expert to detect the bad money.

IN TRIBUTE TO HER MEMORY.

AND A GLOWING PICTURE OF A WELL SPENT LIFE

We copy the following beautiful tribute to Mrs. A. B. Weaver from the Clearfield "Raftsman's Journal:"

On Sunday evening at 5 o'clock the angel of death again entered our midst and summoned to her long home Mrs. A. B. Weaver, at the early age of 29 years. When the sad news spread over the town every person who knew her deeply mourned for the loss of one whose life was sunshine, and whose loveliness of character made friends of all with whom she came in contact. An additional sadness is given to her death from the fact that it occurred on the eighth anniversary of her married life, at precisely the same hour of the day. Just eight years ago on Sunday last, the friends whose tearful eyes watched the soul take its flight were gathered at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Harris, in Bellefonte, to witness the marriage of their daughter, Nannie Harris, to Mr. A. B. Weaver, of this place. These friends congratulated her upon her marriage to one so prominent in society and successful in business, whose life was to be made happy by the influence of a wife endowed with all the attributes of the true lady. With favorable surroundings they started on life's journey with a future full of promise. They reared and occupied a beautiful home on Second street where nothing but sunshine and happiness ever entered. Six years ago their only child, Mary, was born to them, and as the years rolled on, she grew into interesting childhood, and gave an additional charm to the already happy home.

On Sunday, May 31st, as was Mrs. Weaver's usual custom, she attended church in the morning, taught her class in the Sabbath school, and again in the afternoon taught in the colored Sunday school although she was not well. That evening she was taken violently ill, the family physician was called, and for several days her life was despaired of. She rallied, however, bnt at no time was she considered out of danger. To all she expressed herself as willing to go. Although life to her was sweet, she feared not death. On Sunday morning she grew suddenly worse. Loving hands could do nothing to check the ravages of the fell destroyer, and at five o'clock she passed peacefully into the eternal sleep that knows no waking, surrounded by many of the friends who had witnessed her marriage just eight years before. All who knew Mrs. Weaver called her friend, because she posessed the characteristics of a womanly woman. Her life was marked by golden deeds, and while she adhered closely to the doctrines of the church, of which she was a consistent member, it can be truly said that to DO GOOD was her religion, and the true christian character was exemplified in all that she did in and out of the church. She was constantly striving to make an impression for good in the church, the Sunday school, the home and society.

True worth is found within the breast
That bears a heart both warm and true;
A heart that makes its owner blest,
And sheds its beams on others too.

True, of Nannie Weaver, she seemed most happy when by some kind word or generous deed she could lift a pang of sorrow from the heart of those in trouble. Devoted as she was to her home and her family; noble as she was in character; lovely and amiable as she was in all that the words imply, her loss will be felt keenly and all will mourn her sudden demise.

The funeral took place from the family residence at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Beautiful toiler, thy work all done,
Beautiful soul into glory gone,
Beautiful life with its crown now won,
God giveth thee rest.

Rest from all sorrows and watching and fears,
Rest from all possible sighing and tears,
Rest through God's endless, wonderful years,
At home with the blest.

The Merry Vacation Days.

It is now that the small boy with fifteen cents in his inside pocket hies to the nearest sporting goods store and exultingly purchases for himself a dozen bass hooks, one-half dozen flies and fifteen yards fishing line, and with visions of six-feet pike, fifteen-inch trout, and twenty-eight-inch bass reeling through his brain humps himself home to load himself down a degree heavier with cold victuals, after which with another juvenile with similar pleasant anticipations he forthwith takes himself "steen" miles from the hamlet on a "sundowner-day" and casts his line in a 3x4 stream and the vigilance with which he eyes that floating cork is something seeming super-human and appalling. After five hours of wistful gazing he goes to killing bull-frogs for revenge. Then he returns home only to repeat the performance a week later.

THE game of baccarat which wrought such sad havoc with the reputation of sundry people of high degree in England, has been introduced into the German court at Berlin, and if it succeeds in making royalty as odious and unpopular there as it has done in England nobody will regret the result. The trial of the baccarat scandal has given the game a wide advertisement, and people of fashion where it is not in vogue and who are looking for a new gambling game will no doubt give it a trial, but in this country there is little danger that it will seriously displace our own seductive national game of draw poker.

Thursday and in consequence thereof the town is to-day plastered over with glaring pictures setting forth the manifold attractions to be exhibited on the glass works meadow on Saturday, June 27th. This will be another picnic for the small boy and the printer.

BATTLE ON AN ENGINE.

FIREMAN AND ENGINEER, RIVALS IN LOVE, FIGHT ABOUT IT.

A thrilling encounter, a dispatch from Alliance, Ohio, says, took place Saturday afternoon on board an engine on the Lake Erie, Alliance, and Southern railroad, between the fireman and engineer. Edward Benitz, the engineer, and James McSwigan, the fireman, were both candidates for the hand of Miss Julia Spieler, a pretty brunette, who resides with her parents at Bergholz, the southern terminus of the road. Both men were aware of the other's intentions, but never discussed the matter on their runs, and were known to be on good terms. They left Bergholz Saturday afternoon at 3.20 with a mixed passenger and freight train. When within twenty minutes of Alliance, McSwigan told Benitz that he had proposed to Julia and had been accepted.

This enraged the engineer, and, releasing his hold on the throttle, he sprang upon his rival and a terrible battle ensued. The train was then running at a rate of twenty-five miles an hour, and sped on as the two men fought. McSwigan grabbed a shovel to defend himself, but the engineer wrested it from his grasp, and soon had him upon his back on the tender pummeling him fearfully. A brakeman standing on top of a box car witnessed the encounter, and summoning aid, rushed forward and separated the combatants.

The train in the meantime had not slackened its speed, and the passengers were unaware of the scene that was occrring on the engine. On the promise that the matter would not be reported both men resumed their posts. One of the brakemen remained on the cab during the remainder of the journey to see that the battle was not resumed. But both men were evidently willing to let the matter drop.

The Pennsylvania Railroad's Popular Seashore Excursions.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company announces to the people of Western Pennsylvania that the excursions to the seashore, which have won so great a measure of popularity in past seasons, will be repeated during the present summer. A series of four excursions will be run, the first on Thursday, July 9th, the others following on July 23d, August 9th and 20th. Each one of these tours offers a choice between Atlantic City, Cape May, Sea Isle City, or Ocean City, the rate being the same for each.

Excursion tickets good for ten days will be sold at a rate of $10.00 from Pittsburg, and at correspondingly low rates from other stations.

A special train of Parlor Cars and Day Coaches will leave Pittsburg at 8.50 A. M. for Philadelphia, stopping at all important junction points where connection will be made with trains from branch lines. Passengers will spend the night in Philadelphia and proceed to the seashore by regular trains of the next day.

These excursions, on account of the desirability of the seashore points, the liberal limit and low rate of the tickets, and the fine equipment of the special trains, present the most attractive of summer outings.

The rate from Bellefonte is $8.65 and regular train connecting with special leaves at 10.25 A. M.

The Band Tournament.

At the business meeting of the Band Association in Renovo yesterday the election for officers resulted as follows:

President—M. Doyle Marks, of Renovo.
Vice President—E. G. Wittmann, of St. Marys.
Secretary—Coryell Ross, of Renovo.
Treasurer—J. Waldron, St. Marys.
Musical Director—Joel Miller, Ridgway.

The name of the association was changed by dropping the word Central and making it the Pennsylvania Band Tournament Association.

It was unanimously agreed to hold the next meeting in Ridgway on June 16 and 17, 1892. The meeting then adjourned to convene in Ridgway at the President's call to arrange for the next annual tournament.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

—The Lock Haven "Express" is all the time poking fun at Bellefonte's fourth of July celebration, and all with only one reason—that of Jealousy. If the editors in question want to see something fine, they are urged to come to Bellefonte on that occasion and if they won't be compelled to open their sleepy orbs in astonishment and admiration, why we will stand a treat to the soda. Belefonte is not going to have one of your one-horse concerns, a la Lock Haven.

HE WAS A SLICK ONE.

HE HANDLED BOGUS CHECKS LIKE A PROFESSIONAL.

On Wednesday a nice, genteel looking man tried to work the bogus check racket in Bellefonte to the extent of a new suit of clothes but he finally failed and was obliged o raise dust in order to make tracks to at safer climate.

His first exploit was to go to Ed. C. Rowe's furniture store where he represented himself as being an employee of the nail works—a man who had jnst lately been employed and was guaranteed work for two years. He wanted to move his family here and he just stepped in to look at some furniture, as he would be compelled to buy several hundred dollars worth. Before going out he asked Mr. Rowe to fill him up a check on the Centre county bank, to the order of L. T. Munson, as that gentleman had paid his fare here and he wanted to return it to him. The check was drawn for $32 and the man signed it J. G. Van——.

He seemed a fair writer himself and Mr. Rowe then thought it something peculiar that he was asked to fill out the check. From Rowe's the man went to Richard's jewelry store where he purchased a ladies gold watch and chain, price $48.50, and offered the check in payment. Mr Charles Richards examined the check, and as it was not endorsed, of course would not accept it. The man said he would go to Mr. Munson and have him endorse it. He went and in a reasonable time returned, got the watch and chain, paid the bogus check of $32 on account, gave a due bill of $16.50 for the balance then walked off. After he had gone out Mr. Richards took the check up to the bank to see if it was good and then it was pronounced bogus and Mr. Munson's signature a forgery. Mr. Richards immediately started out on the hunt of the chap and after a half hour's search found him in front of the Racket store. He told him his check was no good which, naturally, seemed to surprise the man, but he said he would take it and go right out to Mr. Munson and tell him. "But before you go," said Mr. Richards, "just give me my watch." The man did so.

His next exploit was at Simon Loeb's where he went to purchase a suit of clothes. He found one to suit him, the price of which was $28. He offered another check for $32 in payment thereof and Mr. Loeb, on pretense of going to get some change, went to the bank with the check. Of course it was no good. When Mr. Loeb returned, the man had skipped. The authorities were then notified but no trace of the man could be found. We advise our neighboring towns to be on the look-out for him.

Across the Deep, to the Far West,

On steamboats, cars and stage-coaches. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is carried as the most important item in the materia medica of the traveling public. It deprives vitiated, brackish water of its hurtful propertirs and execrable flaver, counteracts the pernicious effect upon the stomach of bad or indigestible food, remedies cramps, heartburn and wind upon the stomach. It is a fine defense against malarial disorders, nullifies the effect of excessive heat cold and damp, relieves sick-headache, and is an incomparable cure for costiveness and billiousness. The fatigue of travel often tells most disastrously upon invalids and convalescents, occasionally to such an extent as to jeopardize life. Person in feeble health, apprehensive of bad effect from travel, will, if provided with the Bitters, be far less likely to have their fears realized.

Helping the Schools.

The appropriation under the bill allowing the schools of Pennsylvania $5,000,000 a year, instead of $2,000,000, as now, is not payable until the first Monday in June, 1892. Then each district will be entitled to $2.50 for every $1 paid to it at present. The appropriations to the schools are madeaccording to the number of taxables in each district, and the rate distributable is $1.38 3 10 for every taxable. The rate per taxable when the $2,000,000 are paid out of school district will be $3.42¾. Under the law Centre county receivs $17,977.62, while the new law will increase the amount to $44,944.05. Clearfield county will be increased from $38.76 to $60,096.90.

Consumption Cured With Grapes.

This fell destroyer has brought a blight to many a promising life, and sadness to many a home circle. There is one remedial agent that will assist nature in throwing off this terrible disease, viz: Speer's Port wine. It has been used by hundreds with wonderful success; has checked the progress of disease and brought thousands back to health. Its property is to make new blood. For sale by druggists.

—An exchange says: In the beginning God created the heavens, the earth and all things therein. He then created man and woman and left the loafers on the corners, and in due time they multiplied and spread into the postoffice, and the depots and the stores. In the latter place they sit and explain state and national problems that have vexed great minds, that exist partially by sampling goods. While he is thus engaged his wife is out washing for her neighbors, and the poor helpless children are left at home to care for themselves as best as they can. There is nothing more noticeable than a loafer.

ELIXIR OF LIFE AND HEALTH. is one that promotes digestion, improves the appetite, cleanses the liver, purifies the blood, and stimulates brain and nerves without injurious reaction, and one that may be taken alike by adult or infant. Profane compounds, made of vile rum or bad whiskey, sweetened and flavored, under the titles of bitters, tonics, &c, produce effects far worse than the disease for which they are taken Vinegar Bitters is a pure tonic, a nervine without being narcotic, a purifier without poison, a liver tonic without purging, and above all, a life-giving stimulus without alcohol. The only medicine with such powers in the world.
A GENUINE TEMPERANCE BEVERAGE, far surpassing alcohol in any shape as a tonic it might be called LIQUID LIFE,
since it stimulates, invigorates and regulates digestion, nutrition, secretion, excretion, respiration, and all the functions whereby life is maintained—we literally take in vitality in spoonfuls.
It is too much to assert that the equal of Vinegar Bitters' does not exist, and no counterpart or compound with similar virtues has ever been known
CALIFORNIA,
if remarkable for nothing else, would be immortalized by the production of the medicinal fruits roots and herbs of which this Bitters is composed. Many of them used by the Indians and the medical profession in the treatment of chills and fevers rheumatism, catarrh, consumption, neuralgia headaches, liver complaint, kidney disease, jaundice, gout, piles, boils, skin diseases, &c., &c., too numerous to mention, but easily understood when the action of the Bitters on the vital functions is remembered. —The High street bridge across Spring creek is to be repaired.

—A permanent summer camp is being fitted up at Cherry Run.

—Buy a ticket for Miss Bishop's closing assembly on Friday evening.

—Always to be fouud at his post of duty—street sprinkler James E. Solt.

—The funeral of Mr. Harry Kinsell occured in Tyrone on Monday afternoon.

—Strawberries sold in Bellefonte on Tuesday evening at eight cents per box.

—Bellefonte waiters will help serve up the good things at the State College next week.

—The weather of the past week was just glorious for the potato and blackberry crops.

—The Presbyterian congregation is well pleased with Mr. W. T. Meyer as their organist.

—Col. Dunham had an exciting experience with the High Constable and a cow on Monday night.

—There are parties in Bellefonte who are already eating new potatoes out of their own gardens.

—If you want to know how many friends you have ask for favors and you will soon find out.

—One week till State College commencement, and not two weeks until we celebrate the glorious fourth.

—The Reformed church social at the residence of John A. Rupp on Friday evening was well attended.

—Quite a number of Bellefonters attended the funeral of Mr. Moses Thompson, at Centre Furnace on Tuesday.

—This is the week for the outing of the State Editorial Association. They will go to Atlantic City and take a trip down the bay.

—The time for falling from cherry trees is now at hand and, judging from the large record of such accidents, the time is pretty well filled.

—The Queen Anne style of roof being put on General Beaver's house on Lamb street adds very much to the appearance of that building.

—Last Saturday was the first half-holiday under the new law and, judging from appearances, a good many persons took advantage of it.

—Two things which can't be made to harmonize—the small boy and the ordinance forbidding the shooting of fire crackers within the borough limits.

—Miss Bishop will come back to Bellefonte in September to continue instructions in dancing. We predict for her then a larger class than she had this spring.

—Most of the Bellefonte school teachers have finally decided to go to Bedford Springs the first week in July and attend the State Teacher's Association Convention.

—Remember next Saturday is circus day. Washburn & Arlington are said to carry an excellent combination and as the price is put 25 cents everybody can go and see it.

—The general committee on the fourth of July celebration should see to it that the fantastics are given proper encouragement and assistance if they expect them to make a good showing.

—The Bellefonte correspondent of the Williamsport "Gazette and Bulletin" says the dudes and dudesses of Bellefonte have taken to playing baccarat. Wonder if such is the case.

—Geo. F. Potter Post, No. 261, G. A. R., of Milesburg, has accepted the invitation to be present in Bellefonte on the fourth of July and will come up one hundred strong with a drum corps.

—Bellefonte has the most, beautiful, entertaining, bewitching, entrancing and captivating young ladies in this whole wide world. Any person that dont believe the assertion is referred to W. I. Swoop, Esq.

—The Democratic State Committee will meet on June 25th to determine where and when the State Convention shall be held. The Convention will assemble in the latter part of July or the first week in August.

—While assisting to prepare for Children's Day in the M. E. church Mr. Robert Ray received a serious fall injuring his back so badly that he has been confined to the house ever since. We trust he may soon recover.

—The occasional bang of the fire cracker tells of the approach of the anniversary of American Independence.

—It is again stated that the Bellefonte furnaces will start soon after July 9th. We hope this may be correct.

—The new crossing being put down at the diamond by Cunningham will be a regular daisy when once completed and the street properly graded.

—Bardsley's confession has been made and it was of such a seemingly true and correct character as to lead the court to suspend sentence indefinitely.

—The Governor vetoed Senator Meek's bill for taxing foreigners because it was unconstitutional. Just what the NEWS said when the bill was introduced.

—Treasurer Gramley on Monday brought to Bellefonte the poles to be used in the construction of the various arches on the principal streets on the fourth of July.

—Lock Haven does not even think it worthwhile to decorate for her fourth of July demonstration. Bellefonte wouldn't, either, if it wasn't going to have a bigger time than they are.

—The commissioners have finally decided to cover the court house yard with Cunningham's composite pavement, and the job will be done as soon after the 4th of July as possible.

—Monday night an adult male quartette serenaded some of the young ladies in Bellefonte and last night the small boys tried their hands, or rather their mouths, at the same business.

—Mr. Willis Rowe and family will shortly move to Hagerstown, Md. We are sorry to lose them from Bellefonte as they are a very companionable and social family, and Mr. Rowe a good business man.

—The Baccalaureate Sermon at the Pennsylvania State College will be delivered next Sunday, the 28th, by Rev. Geo. W. Chamberlain, of Brazil. The hour is changed this year, and the sermon will be delivered at 10.30. a. m.

—M. Cunningham is very busily engaged putting down his patent composite pavement as a crossing from the Brockerhoff House to the First National bank the crossing when completed will be a decided improvement over the old stone crossing.

—The Lock Haven "Democrat" is authority for the fact that a one-quarter pound strawberry, measuring 6 by 9 inches, was recently marketed in that city. This was either the "boss" strawberry or a monster editorial "yarn," eh, Joe?

—Sunday was Children's Day at the Methodist church and the celebration of that event was superior to any similar circumstance in Bellefonte. The decorations were perfectly exquisite and the program of services rendered could not be surpassed.

—The New York Trunk Lines Association has at last fallen into line with the other roads, and will give return tickets to the great International Convention of Teachers at Toronto, Canada, at single fare. Tickets will be good to return up to Sept. 25th.

—A bogus check man tried to work his game on Landlord Caldwell, of the Irvin House, Lock Haven, and then skipped to Philadelphia. Officer Westbrook took a trip to the Quaker City and now the bogus check man is meditating behind Clinton county jail walls.

—The big steam saw mill of Hopkins & Weymouth, at Snow Shoe, was shut down for all time Saturday afternoon, the last log having been sawed at 4 o'clock. The mill was erected there to saw the lumber on a tract of 5,000 acres, from which the lumber has now been cleaned entirely.

—At the race track meeting on Monday evening all that was done was the appointing of a committee empowered to employ a surveyor to survey the Brockerhoff meadow grounds, lay out a track and estimate the probable maximum cost of putting the thing in shape and report same at next meeting.

—Pass him along. If you meet anywhere a man who has only one leg, begging money enough to get him a cork leg that costs him eighty dollars, just tell him you read the papers and that he has been working that racket several years. If he bought legs with all the money he has collected he would now be a regular thousand legged worm.

—The Chief Marshall, as well as the Burgess, will issue an order prohibiting all shooting of guns or firecrackers during the parade on the fourth of July and a large force of extra police will be appointed to see that the order is obeyed. Therefore, boys, if you don't want to get into trouble remember the above and don't shoot crackers during parade time on the fourth.

—Next year will be leap-year, and we suppose that the girls will organize a brisk campaign. There are many eligible young bachelors and spry widowers around town that should be looked after. And girls, next year would be a good time to remind them of the Scriptural injunction; "It is not good that man should live alone," unless per-adventure, they should awaken to a sense of their duty in the meantime —In the cemetery at Shellsburg, Bedford county, there is a church that has been standing for over 100 years. The exterior looks like an ordinary weatherboarded modern building, but the interior has a very ancient appearance. The pews are old fashioned and the pulpit, which is supported by a post, is a box like affair, reached by a stairway leading to an out side landing and a door. The only use the the church is put to now is for funeral services.

—The famous Milton military band will accompany the Milton fire company to Bellefonte on the fourth. They will come to Lock Haven the evening of the 3rd, spend the night there and come to Bellefonte on the early train Saturday morning.

—The Tyrone base ball club came to Bellefonte on Tuesday and crossed bats with the home team. At the close of the game the score stood 12 to 8 in favor of Bellefonte. Some good plays were made during the game which was more or less interesting all through. One bad feature of the whole thing was the fact that Twitmire, the catcher for the Bellefonters, had two fingers broken. The next game will likely be played in Tyrone.

—There is great need for more light at the Pennsylvania railroad passenger depot in this place. The nearest light to that place is the one on Spring Creek bridge two squares away. The absence of light at the depot not only is a great inconvenience but renders it dangerous for passengers getting on and off the night trains. Can't the railroad company afford to put an arc light there? Or, better still, put two arc lights at the depot; one at the crossing and one up at the baggage room. This would make everything thereabouts as light as day and the company would no doubt appreciate the difference.

—We notice by our exchanges that a number of good industries are hunting good places to locate in. Why can't the Bellefonte Board of Trade be reorganized and see if it could not prove of some benefit by soliciting and encouraging business to come to Bellefonte. There isn't a better location in the United States for important manufactories than just here, and if the proper influence was put forth in behalf of our town there is no reason why Bellefonte should not grow and flourish like a green bay tree. This affair is worthy of great consideration and should be carefully looked into by the business men of this community.

—A novel plan for extinguishing a church debt has been hit upon in Melbourne. The church committee—or vestry, as the case may be—divide the total debt among themselves and each man insures his life for the amount that falls to his share. The policies are transferred to the church, and the annual payments on them are made out of the collections. Then, of course, as the members of committee "drop off," the sums insured on their lives drop in, and later, when the last committeeman is dead, the last installment of the church debt will be paid. The plan has the merit—if merit it be—of throwing the whole of the responsibility for the continuance of the indebtedness upon Providence.

—But I prefer the more honest way. Give me the press. Give me that advertisement which a man does not sponge; for which he pays like a man and which brings to him many returns. At the risk of trampling on the ethics of a profession I am willing to let the world know through the columns of the great newspapers that I am not here for my health. You gentlemen may disown me, but I want to tell you right now that while you are running around on foot after some good-natured reporter to write up your departure from or arrival to the city, or something else that you didn't do, I will ride up in my cushioned carriage to the newspaper's office and pay for my advertisement like a little man.—H. O. Conway, M. D.

Miss Bishop's Assembly.

On Friday evening a large gathering of handsomely dressed ladies and gentlemen gathered in Bush's Hall to witness the second assembly given by Miss Bishop. The Elite orchestra furnished the music for the occasion and it was most delightful. The orchestra is composed of a body of very fine looking young men, was the verdict of the ladies. A lengthy programme of very fascinating dances was rendered. Among the guests present were Miss Mary Barrows, Lock Haven; Miss Davis, a guest of Miss Emma Aikens; Mr. Nevlin, of Clearfield; Mr. Gossler, of Philadelphia; Miss Alice Lyon, of Philadelphia; two young ladies, the guests of Miss Katie Harris; and Miss Betz, of Clearfield. The anticipation of a delightful time was fully realized.

Miss Bishop's last assembly will be held on the evening of the 27th, when the Stopper & Fisk orchestra will be present and furnish the music.

If you select good and healthy food for your family, you should also look to the welfare of your bady. For all troubles of early childhood nothing is better than Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup.

DEATH OF MOSES THOMPSON.

AFTER A PROTRACTED ILLNESS HE EXPIRES AT HIS HOME ON FRIDAY EVENING.

Mr. Moses Thompson died at his home at Centre Furnace, near State College, on Friday evening about 7 o'clock, in the 82nd year of his age, and after a protracted illness of a number of weeks. Mr. Thompson never fully recovered from the shock occasioned by the accident of some time ago by which he had three fingers taken off with a circular saw. Later he contracted the grippe which culminated in pneumonia and that caused his death.

Mr. Thompson was one of Centre county's oldest and most influential citizens. He was born on March 25, 1810, on the farm now owned by his grandfather now in College township. His father was Gen. John Thompson, who was of Scotch-Irish descent. His education was only such as a farmer's boy at that early day could obtain. At the early age of nineteen he took entire charge of his father's farm, owing to the latter's declining health.

On the 4th of January, 1838, he was married to Mary Irvin, daughter of John Irvin, of Harris township, by whom he had eight children, most of whom are now dead. On the first of April 1842, he purchased a sixth interest in Centre Furnace and the Milesburg Iron Works and in 1848 he became one-half owner of the same. In 1865 he sold his interest in the Milesburg property to McCoy & Linn and bought their interest in Centre Furnace, thus becoming the full owner of the same.

Mr. Thompson was a stockholder in the old Bald Eagle valley canal, and also in the Bald Eagle valley railroad. He contributed more than anyone else in money to the construction of the various turnpikes in Centre county. He was also one of the largest contributors towards the Lewisburg railroad, and was one of the men who assisted largely in putting the State College on a firm footing, of which College he was treasurer for many years.

He was a strict member of the Presbyterian church and for long years has been a ruling elder. He would never at any time allow his name to be used for any public office but devoted his whole life entirely to business. He was one of Centre county's eminently successful business men and was probably the largest land-owner in the county, at one time, and maybe yet, owning six thousand acres of valuable farm land lying in one body in the heart of the valley.

The funeral will occur at 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning from his late residence at Centre Furnace.

State College Appropriation.

From the Tyrone Herald

EDITOR HERALD:—Last Saturday morning when the news reached us that the governor had signed the bill appropriating $150,500 to the college, there was general rejoicing among the students and throughout the whole community; $100,000 of which sum is for the erection of a civil, mechanical and mining engineering building, $2,000 for athletics, and the remaining $48,500 for the building of two residences and equipments for the different departments.

At 4 p. m. there was a meeting in the chapel of the faculty, students and citizens for the purpose of congratulating one another on receiving the appropriation. The orchestra rendered a fine selection after which President Atherton made a brief talk expressing his intense feeling of joy over the fortune which had fallen to us and which is to play such an important part in our future prosperity.

General Beaver, who had driven up from Bellefonte to congratulate our worthy president, Dr. Atherton, then gave an elegant address which was full of enthusiasm. He imparted to us just what this appropriation meant to the college, and that no change, as has been recently shown, in the executive head of the government would change the attitude of the State of Pennsylvania towards the Pennsylvania State College. The foundation which the state has laid here binds the executive department, as a State, to carry out those plans. He also said that the students of this institution had certain advantages over those of other institutions and that no college in this country affords better facilities for a sound education, especially in the scientific courses.

Men who came here, from all sections of the state, as members of the appropriations committee and visitors some of whom were bitter enemies of the college, after a thorough investigation of the work done in the different departments and observing the earnestness and interest which the students display in discharging their different duties went away highly pleased, some of whom proved to be our warmest friends in upholding the college during the debates in the Senate and House. He closed his remarks with hearty congratulations to all.

A committee was then appointed which drew up resolutions recognizing the wise liberality of the state and giving the assurance of the institution being worthy of the trust thus imposed.

In order to show to the many people throughout our state, who are prejudicial to the college, the work we are doing we ask them to visit us and we are sure they will be more than pleased just as those men who were before mentioned.

A STUDENT.

If you decide from what you have heard or read, that you will take Hood's Sarsaparilla, do not be induced to buy any substitute instead.

Killed On the Railroad.

Huntingdon Local News, 18th: Yesterday morning about 11 o'clock an unknown man was killed on the Pennsylvania railroad a short distance east of Spruce Creek tunnel. He was walking on the track and in avoiding a freight train was struck by Limited Express train east, and had a large hole cut in the back of his head, breaking his neck and causing instant death. His body was picked up, placed on the train that struck him and brought to this place. There were no papers upon his person by which he could be identified. He is snpposed to have been an Italian laborer, aged about 45 years. He was six feet tall, weighed 160 pounds, dark hair, light moustache, blue eyes, and had on a blue short coat, blue checkered vest, brown striped shirt, two pairs of blue drill ng overalls, black narrow rimmed slouch hat and heavy shoes. Seventy-five cents were found in his pockets. He was in this town on Tuesday night, and quartered in the lockup. The remains were given in charge of the county and buried tin he cemetery here.

Infancy to Old Age.

Nothing is more remarkable than the fact that a medicine which is powerful enough to cure the most horrible form of blood poisoning can be given with impunity to a little child that is ailing; and yet this is the record of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) It is a germ destroyer, a purifier, a great remedial agent; it is powerful, and yet harmless; it is a medicine that contains no mineral poisons; all its results are beneficent; it is compounded from nature's own laboratory, and works on nature's lines to cure disease; it restores, revives and reinvigorates the system; it may be used as a tonic by the most delicate woman; it may be given to build up the constitution of a little child, or it may be employed to restore to health the unhappy victim of blood poisoning. In each case it will work wonderful results.

A Hint For Campers Out.

One season when I was camping on Lake Winnipisegee, N. H., says a correspondent of the Brooklyn Union, night found us in a wild cove, surrounded by damp swamps and morasses, and consequently infested with mosquitoes. We disliked the place, but the night was dark, we were on a strange shore, and reluctantly we pitched our tent. It proved just as we expected. The little pests swarmed upon us in clouds. Sleep was impossible and we devoted the first hour of the evening to fighting our small enemies. We smoked cigars and pipes until we could scarcely breathe in the stifling air. This they seemed to like buzzed all the more merrily for it. We scented ourselves and the bedding with essence of peppermint, with spearmint and carbolic acid, which pleased them so well that the myriads inside the tent called upon other myriads outside to come in and enjoy it. The situation was getting desperate. At last I thought of one more expedient, which had been recommended but which I had forgotten. I searched through my stores and brought out a piece of gum camphor. Taking a piece about the size of a walnut, I placed it on a tin plate and set fire to it. It burned as readily as pitch, with a bright, clear flame and apparently no smoke. And it acted like a charm. In two minutes the noisy hum of the mosquitoes had ceased; in five minutes not one of our winged persecutors remained within the walls of our tent. Then making everything comfortable and carefully covering our one window with mosquito netting, we went to sleep and slept the sleep of the just with never a bite nor a hum from our odious foes for the rest of the night.

Buy Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. It cures without fail. To be had at all dealers for 25 cents.

"Heaven's last best gift—my ever new delight," is not my brown-stone house, nor my carriage and pair, nor my fine new yacht, nor my prettiest girl, nor my hopes of a seat in congress, nor these, but my wonderful cure for pain, Salvation Oil.

Mr. Herr Honored.

Joel A. Herr, of Clinton county, has been appointed one of the thirty commissioners to represent the State of Pennsylvania at the Columbian world's fair at Chicago in 1893. Mr. Herr is an intelligent and well educated farmer and will doubtless perform his duties with entire satisfaction. Mr. Herr is a cousin of Mr. E. E. Herr, the insurance agent of this place.

Miss Kate Kelley, of Snow Shoe, is visiting friends in Bellefonte.

Landlord Brandon enjoys a drive as well as anybody in Bellefonte.

Miss Deemay Thomas, of Sunbury, is the guest of her aunt, Miss Mary McGill.

Mrs. Colonel Rodgers, of Philadelphia, is the guest of her friend, Mrs. D. H. Hastings.

Hon. James Milliken returned on Saturday from an extended trip through the west.

Prof. Segadlo, the dancing master of Newark, N. J., is visiting friends in Bellefonte.

Miss Nellie Bradley has just returned from an extended visit in the West Branch valley.

Mr. James Schofield departed on Tuesday for New York and Saturday will sail for Ireland.

Miss Lorena Mattern, of Milesburg, is visiting her friend, Miss Virginia Bouse, in Tyrone.

Mrs. I D. Garman is spending the week with Mrs. Edwin F. Garman, on East Linn street.

Insurance agent W. H. Musser spent Tuesday down Bald Eagle among the Howardites.

Miss Ada Thomas, of Philadelphia, is now in Bellefonte and will spend most of the summer here.

He has gone—Mr. James Schofield, for Ireland. May he have a pleasant voyage and an enjoyable trip.

District Attorney J. C. Meyer and Ex-deputy Sheriff R. K. Wilson returned from Madison Saturday morning.

Mrs. J. M. Bentley, daughter of Mr. H. C. Yeager, of the Brockerhoff House, is visiting her friends in Bellefonte.

Mr. S. D. Ray went to Snow Shoe Tuesday to do some surveying. Mr. Ray is one of the best surveyors in Centre county.

Mrs. Stuart Pearce and two children has gone to Lock Haven to visit friends. From there she will return to her home in Conneaut, Ohio.

Misses Jennie Rose, of Sunbury, and Anna Showalter, of Bushville, are visiting their friend, Miss Mary Sourbeck, on Bishop street.

Prof. A. H. Gerberich, of the Lebanon Valley College, Annville, Pa., is at present visiting at the residence of his brother, Mr. C. T. Gerberich, on Thomas street.

Mr. Thomas Shaughensey, Bellefonte's street commissioner, is contemplating a visit this summer to his Ireland home. He has been in this country 24 years.

Mr. John W. Moore has gone to Ellensburg, Washington, to where the new gold excitement has broken out. Hope he may "strike it rich" and come back one of the gold kings of '91.

That prince of good fellows, Mr. Maurice Yeager, son of Mr. H. C. Yeager, of the Brockerhoff House, and who is now press agent for the Duquense theatre, in Pittsburg, is at his home in Bellefonte.

We have thus far omitted to make mention of the return to Bellefonte on Thursday evening of the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Achenback. They will hold their first "at home" at the Brockerhoff House on Friday, June 26th.

Mrs. W. S. Port, and children departed on Tuesday on the early train for Clarion county to which place her husband and one little son preceded her some few weeks ago. They expect to establish themselves in Mr. Port's old home for an indefinite period. Mr. Port and family have been residents of Howard St. for over three years. They have erected a handsome residence on East Howard street, and made all preparations to make this their future home, but "duty before pleasure" always, and as Mr. Port's parents are quite aged and his father, at this writing, is quite ill, they need the attention of someone, and he felt as though it was his duty to go home and care for them. We are very sorry to lose him, since it cannot be otherwise, we wish him happiness and prosperity in tilling the soil. His oldest son, Henry B., a clerk at China Hall, and Miss Louisa Reed, an aunt of Mrs. Port, will remain here for a time.
